LaborRenews War as C.I.O. Invites A.F.L. Units to Rally

Green Denounces Proposed Meeting of Furniture Workers.

Organization Talk Set Here Nov. 27-29

Drive to Amalgamate Whole Industry in U.S. to Be Worked Out.

By William V. Nessly.

The C. I. O.-A. F. L. war broke out fiercely again yesterday after only one day of calm had followed an eight-day recessing of the two groups' reunion conference.

John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chieftain, issued a call for a "national unity conference" here November 27-29 of all union groups in the furniture, bedding and allied trades, including A. F. L. unions, "for the purpose of uniting all furniture workers into a single industrial union, affiliated with the C. I. O."

Immediately William Green, embattled president of the American Federation of Labor, declared:

"This move can only be interpreted by us as another warlike gesture by the C. I. O. It is bound to have a disturbing effect upon the pending peace negotiations. It seems to us indicative of the insincerity of the C. I. O. position."

80,000 Are Organized.

More than 250,000 workers are employed in the trades concerned, Lewis estimated, with about 80,000 of them organized in different unions.

The conference call was issued to "all local industrial unions of the C. I. O. in the furniture industry; the Upholsterers, Furniture, Carpet, Lineoleum and Awning Workers International Union, A. F. L. affiliate, and its locals; to all A. F. L. Federal and State chartered locals in the industry, as well as to all other local unions in the industry, whether independent or affiliated to C. I. O. or A. F. L. international unions."

In order to "let things calm down," headquarters of both factions here had said on Thursday there would be no further declarations on the unity proposals submitted by either side, and promptly rejected by the other, in the three days of parleying here early this week.

Call Obeys Resolution.

Earlier yesterday, before the Lewis announcement was issued, both sides had insisted that the peace conference would be resumed next Thursday, despite the seeming hopelessness of trying to get together on their poles-apart attitudes.

The furniture conference call was issued in pursuance of a resolution

Md. U. Pep Bonfire Causes Panic and Tangles Up Traffic

University of Maryland students, steaming up pep for the homecoming game today with the University of Florida, with the traditional bonfire last night, brought no less than ten fire companies on the run to College Park when some citizen saw the glare and turned in a general alarm.

Traffic on the Washington-Baltimore highway was tied up a mile and a half each way from the campus and required more than an hour to untangle. Unperturbed by the unexpected incursion of fire apparatus from every neighboring town, the students went on with their rally and staged a snake dance at the height of the excitement.

Built near Margaret Brent Hall, the women's dormitory, the bonfire was sponsored by the Student Government Association with sanction of college authorities. The football squad and coach were present, with practically the entire student body.

At no time were university buildings endangered.

Despite War Admiral's name in the entries, an air of confidence prevailed about the stable as Heelfly, 3-year-old colt, who raced the veteran Seabiscuit to a dead heat in the Laurel Stakes, prepared for the Washington Handicap, today's feature. His stallmate and mascot, "Petey," an aged Pekin duck, which has a preference for a sloppy track, made the rounds with him as he cooled off yesterday after a blowout. Stableboys said "Petey's" actions indicated victory. Entries and story, page 20.

Minimum Wage Believed Fixed At $17 to $19

D. C. Board to Announce Official Pay for Women Tuesday.

The District Minimum Wage Board conference last night decided on the lowest salary to be paid women but withheld announcement.

On reliable authority, it was learned, however, that the figure is between $17 and $19 weekly.

After a four-hour meeting, the nine members of the conference and the three members of the board emerged to say their announcement had been postponed. The conference has been considering the question for almost six weeks on evidence submitted by both employer and employe groups. The employers estimated that $14.57 a week would be a fair salary. The shop girls held out for $21.51 weekly.

Last night's meeting was called to bring about a final decision by the conference for recommendation to the board for approval. The agreement was reached by a majority vote.

The decision of the board and the estimate of the conference will be made public at a meeting Tuesday night.

Proposal to Tax Excess Crops Facing Battle

Sentiment Develops for Strengthening Soil Conservation Act.

By Robert C. Albright.

An ever-normal granary program based on "tilled acreage" control but with compulsory tax features widely varying for different farm commodities, yesterday was being whipped into tentative form by the House Agriculture committee.

A tobacco control program, imposing a 50 per cent tax on types produced in excess of quotas, already was drafted in preliminary form, but differences of opinion on corn, cotton and other plans promised some trouble.

Opposition to compulsory compliance through steep taxation of excess production was growing on products other than tobacco. Sentiment was developing for mere strengthening of the Soil Conservation act for some commodities, with benefit payments held out as "bait" to encourage farmer participation.

Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, who promised a tentative bill embracing

Sects Win Fight Against Using 'Worldly' PWA Schoolhouse

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 29.—Pennsylvania's "plain people," who haven't changed a religious custom since they settled here in 1712, today won a year-long fight to keep their children "away from the worldly temptations" of a modern, $112,000 PWA school building.

A half-dozen Amish and Mennonite tobacco growers called on Gov. George Earle in an appeal to return their children to the ten little red schoolhouses that were replaced this fall. He complied.

"This is a matter of religion," said Earle as he ordered the schools reopened at the State's expense.

"These people," said John Landberg, attorney for the farmers, "believe there are too many worldly temptations in this new school. They were satisfied with the old ones. They don't want their children to grow away from the farm and the religion."

The new building at Smoketown, in Lancaster County, has been boycotted by 30 Amish and Mennonite children since it was opened early this month. It has electricity and radio. The Amish religion forbids such innovations in their homes. Half the cost was borne by Federal relief funds. The Amish and Mennonites are prohibited from accepting any charity, public or private.

The Governor learned it would cost the State $6,000 a year for teachers' salaries.

"This is a pittance, and for that amount of money I wouldn't interfere with religion," he declared.

Earle made plain the new school would be continued for the other children.

Board Plans Play Center Unification

Co-ordination of Recreation Facilities Advised by Commission.

Present Divided Control Long a Target of D. C. Civic Leaders.

Permanent merger of the Capital's public playgrounds and recreation centers under one administrative agent was urged yesterday by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which announced it will seek the necessary legislation at the coming session of Congress.

Action was taken following the presentation of a committee report showing how co-ordination of District, Board of Education and National Capital parks recreational facilities worked out during the year ended last June 30.

The commission was so much pleased with the results, said Secretary T. S. Settle, that it voted to co-operate with the District Commissioners in striving for Congressional legislation to unify all publicly owned swimming pools and play areas. Fruition of the plan would mean dissolution of the District playground department, the National Capital parks recreation division and part, if not all, of the Community Center Department of the Board of Education.

Present System Scored.

The present three-cornered system has been the target of many officials and civic leaders for years. Yesterday's co-ordination report was presented by a sub-committee of the President's recreation committee, appointed by President Roosevelt several years ago for the purpose of solving the problem.

Final approval was given the revised draft of a new zoning law for the District, one which the commission claims will bring up to date the original 1920 statute now in force. The proposed measure now goes back to the Zoning Commission, which will arrange for its introduction in Congress, Settle said.

The planning body ratified an agreement to advance $200,000 to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for purchase of land to extend Rock Creek Park in Montgomery County from Connecticut avenue to Garrett Park. Two-thirds of the sum in the form of a loan and the remainder is an outright grant, allocation of the funds being authorized by the Capper-Crampton act.

Expert to Be Hired.

Taking up traffic matters, the planners decided to hire an expert to make a study of the troublesome intersection of Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues and heard Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst explain proposed by-passing of Georgetown traffic and redesigning of Scott, Dupont and Thomas circles.

They also recommended that Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan and Traffic Director W. H. VanDuzer call together, for a round table discussion, representatives of all Federal departments and the larger independent agencies and try to agree upon an hour-staggering scheme satisfactory to all.

Tacit disapproval of the suggested demolition of Fort Totten to make way for a new reservoir was handed down when the Commission requested the Water Department and the Army Engineer's Office to seek another site. Fort Totten is the only completely preserved Civil War stronghold still remaining in the Capital.

Schacht Still Minister; Can't Quit, Says Hitler

Berlin, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The efforts of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht to create an accomplished fact by announcing he had ceased to be Germany's economics minister were disclosed today to have failed. Chancellor Hitler, it was learned, had declined for the present to give Dr. Schacht his discharge.

Married a Month, Pair Find They're Brother and Sister

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A marriage annulment brought to light today a month-old secret marriage between a brother and sister in which neither was aware of the blood relationship until three days ago.

The petition on which the marriage was annulled in Wright County circuit court set forth this story:

Ben Ipock, now 23, and his sister, Mary Lee, 21, were placed in a children's home in 1918 after the death of their mother. The girl was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Ben Williams and the boy was reared by Mr. and Mrs. Sid Yocum. They took the names of their foster parents and grew up without knowledge of each other's whereabouts.

The couple met when the youth obtained employment on the Williams farm last summer. They were married September 27 and subsequently learned of their relationship.

Rails to Ask 508-Million Rate Boost

15 Pct. More on Freight, ½-Cent Passenger Increase Sought.

Vote Petition to I. C. C.; Association Head Cites Revenue 'Crisis.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The Nation's major railroads today voted to seek increases in freight and passenger rates calculated to boost their annual income by $508,000,000.

The Association of American Railroads decided to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission to authorize a 15 per cent hike in all freight charges except those on "coal, coke, lumber, fruits, vegetables and sugar, for which certain maximums will be asked in each instance."

The organization of all class one carriers also elected to petition the I. C. C. immediately for permission to advance coach fares in the Eastern district from the current 2 cents a mile rate to 2½ cents and coach fares in the Southern district from the present 1½ cents basis to 2 cents a mile.

West Lines Seek Increase.

Western lines joined in a move to obtain a $5 increase in transcontinental fares between Chicago and the Pacific Coast with corresponding adjustments between intermediate points and increases in the round trip, 30-day coach fares and round trip, intermediate tourist car fares.

Executives estimated the new freight scale would bring in an additional $459,500,000 annually, with $48,500,000 more realized from the higher passenger schedule.

J. J. Pelley, the association's president, authorized a statement outlining the attitude of the industry. It was in part:

"This action has been forced

13 Saved as Pilot Lands Plane on 1 Wheel at Newark

Newark, N. J., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—An American Airlines transport, with damaged landing gear, circled Newark Airport for an hour and a half this afternoon while eight men and five women on board wondered whether they would land safely or be broken to pieces.

Through all those 90 minutes, while airport attendants, police, firemen and ambulance crews waited anxiously on the ground, Pilot B. C. (Dinty) Moore, of Chicago, and his copilot, Kenneth Case, of Marshfield, Mo., tried desperately to lower a jammed landing wheel.

It was no use, and Moore, a veteran of 12 years of flying, brought the ship down in a perfect one-wheel landing.

Japan's Navy to Blast Heroic Lost Battalion, Saved a Day by British

Income Rise For Poor, Aim Of Roosevelt

Capital Gains Levy Cut Rumors Rebuked by President.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 29.—President Roosevelt, starting a series of conferences on budget balancing today, placed great emphasis on his hopes for increasing the income and purchasing power of a third of the country's population whose living conditions are substandard.

He said at a press conference that the wages and hours and surplus crop control measures, principal items of business of the special session of Congress meeting November 15, were steps planned to lift purchasing power.

At another point, he said that newspaper stories speculating on possible revision of the capital gains and undistributed surpluses taxes had omitted reference to that portion of the population with little to live on.

Particularly, the President added, the speculation omitted mention of increasing the purchasing power of 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 persons who lack a decent standard of living now.

The President made no direct comment on the speculation as to possible repeal or adjustment of present taxes on capital gains and undistributed surpluses, but said he wished to emphasize that the speculative stories were from the point of view of the people who have and not from the viewpoint of the substandard population.

He said no mention was made in the speculation of the taxes the substandard group must bear.

Looks For Income Increase.

He expressed hope of great future increases in the income of the total population, saying that from $85,000,000,000 the national income probably would go on to $70,000,000,000 and might even later continue to $80,000,000,000 or $100,000,000,000.

He said in that connection that a Labor Department study showed direct Government action had decreased the national income $2,500,000,000 this year as compared with last. A $1,500,000,000 item was eliminated from Federal payments to citizens because there was no soldiers' bonus. The remaining $1,000,000,000 cut was due to a decrease in the money the Government made available for relief purposes.

National Youth Administrator Aubrey Williams and Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, will confer with the President tomorrow.

The President talked to newsmen a short time before beginning an evening conference with Secretary Morgenthau and Undersecretary Magill of the Treasury on the budget.

They studied ways and means of making the Treasury's books balance in the quiet of the President's family home. Mr. Roosevelt, answering a question, said beforehand that taxes would be among 50 subjects that probably would be discussed.

Daniel W. Bell, the budget director, will come here Monday for another of the budget conferences.

Can't Stand Strain, So Hospital Staff of 22 Nurses Resigns

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Twenty-two nurses, the entire nursing staff of the Douglas County Hospital, resigned today, saying "there is an end to human endurance" and added "we are unable to stand the physical and mental strain." They are caring for 356 patients.

Spokesmen for the nurses said the nursing staff had gradually decreased through resignations due to failure of the county to pay salaries promptly.

The nurses' statement contended "every day we work under these conditions we are endangering the lives of patients."

Agriculture Chief, Army Paper Head Ousted by Russia

Moscow, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Mikhail A. Chernoff was removed as commissar of agriculture of the Soviet Union today by the central executive committee. R. I. Eikh was named his successor.

No reason was given for the dismissal, but alleged anti-Soviet wrecking of agriculture has brought a wave of trials and executions of local officials throughout the provinces.

Removal of M. M. Landa from the army's official newspaper, Red Star, of which he had been editor since 1930, became known when the organ appeared with the name of G. V. Barandoff as editor.

Heroes to Be Blasted.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 30.—The Japanese navy today gave China's "lost battalion" in Chapei until tomorrow to surrender and warned American and British defense units and residents of nearby sections in the International Settlement to take precautions.

Unless the Chinese give up their warehouse stronghold just across Soochow Creek from the American defense positions, the Japanese said they would blast them out.

Rear Admiral Tadao Honda, Japanese naval attache, officially declared Japanese patience was exhausted with the "more or less heroic stand" of the "do-or-die" unit of the crack Eighty-eighth division.

Foreigners Warned.

He warned all residents living in the International Settlement near the sector and the American and British defense units in close proximity to take precautions to avert possible casualties and damage.

Rear Admiral Honda did not disclose exactly when the Japanese planned to take action against the battalion if it would not surrender but inferred the deadline would be after midnight tonight so noncombatants might move out of the danger zone.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 30.—A huge blue flag of the Chinese republic waved mockingly over an army of 40,000 Japanese in shell-racked Chapei today as a "doomed battalion" of less than 200 men held out against every effort to drive them out.

The stand of the Chinese "suicide soldiers," who have vowed to die rather than retreat, assumed international proportions when the Japanese invaded British defense territory to attempt a rear attack.

British riflemen sent them scuttling back, and the Japanese—although they previously announced they would give up the attempt to drive the Chinese from a shell-scarred warehouse where they have fortified themselves—resumed the battle.

"We will never let them escape alive," they declared.

The heroic stand of the little band has fired all China with patriotic

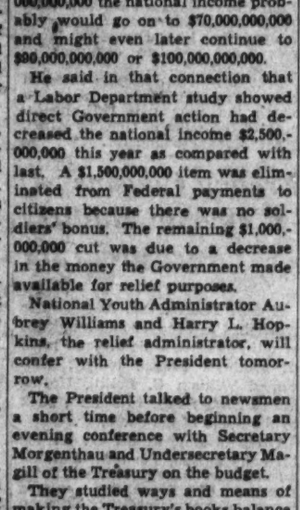
Welfare Board Hides Facts, Dismissed Head Of Girls' School Charges, Requests Inquiry

Dr. Carrie Smith Blames Removal on Her Humane Discipline.

Dismissed as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls "for the good of the service," Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith last night charged the Board of Public Welfare with suppressing facts and indicated she would seek an inquiry into Washington's entire system of juvenile correction methods."

She also charged local officials with discrimination against her liberal policies of discipline. Recent disturbances at the school, resulting once in a riot call to police, were blamed, in large measure, for Dr. Smith's dismissal. Elwood Street, director of the board, urged her "immediate discharge" in a report to the District Commissioners.

"The Board of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia, like most boards," Dr. Smith said last night in a statement to The Post, "is concerned in 'keeping on lids.'"



DR. CARRIE W. SMITH.

To her intimation that she would seek an investigation of local methods of dealing with juvenile delinquency, the board replied that it "welcomes an investigation of any or all of its institutions."

Dr. Smith's statement to The Post continued:

"The expose by prominent officials of wretched conditions at the National Training School for Girls was naturally distasteful. They, however, went along in a more or less interested way with the efforts of the writer to clean up the place physically and for a time were patient with the disciplinary difficulties incident to a transition period.

"These difficulties were greatly increased after the first year by the insistence on the part of the board that an admission policy was not tenable. The National Training School for Girls had always been pride unlike anything else that has happened since the war broke out.

British Prevent Rear Attack on Lost Battalion

Chapei's Doomed 200 Fly New Flag as Japanese Quit Foreign Area.

"This place is our tomb," the doomed men told newsmen during a brief lull in firing.

From the Chinese military commander of the Eighty-eighth Division, Lieut. Gen. Sun Yuan-liang, came this message:

"Shed your last drop of blood fulfilling the sacred duty of defending national territory for the glory of the Chinese."

The Japanese command, apparently despairing of destroying the battalion after three days of blasting at the two connected warehouses where they have intrenched themselves, earlier in the night announced they would withdraw.

The almost frenzied jubilation of the Chinese, who hailed the defense of the "dare-to-die" men as an "inspiring victory," apparently caused the Japanese to change their plans.

British troops adjoining the doomed "godown" said the Japanese were prepared to 'mow them down with machine guns" if they attempted to leave the warehouse, even under protection of foreign troops.

"They must be destroyed," the Japanese said.

The stand of the "doomed battalion" also drew the British and Japanese into a sharp altercation when British Ulster riflemen, guarding the western defense sector in the International Settlement, refused to permit Japanese motorboats, one carrying a 2-inch field piece, to creep up the river and attack the warehouse from the rear.

British Nearly Trap Attackers.

Chinese boatmen, under the direction of British troops, built a "river boom" across Soochow Creek when they saw the Japanes boats nosing upstream, and the Japanese barely escaped being penned up and mowed down by snipers.

Brig. Gen. A. P. D. Telfer-Smollett, commander of the British troops, telephoned Rear Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa sharply protesting the maneuver, which he said endangered foreign lives.

A British officer observed that the attempt to use the British defense sector as a base of attack was "the most gall the Japanese have yet shown" in the Shanghai fighting.

A chunky, black-eyed 14-year-old Girl Scout shared the praise which China has bestowed on the courageous band. She crept over a narrow strip of ground, partly covered from Japanese fire by the width of the building, carrying a huge new flag of the Chinese Republic to the "suicide men."

At dawn today the new banner of blue, with its 16-point sun in dazzling white, floated over the Continental Bank and Joint Savings Bank buildings where the men are entrenched.

The girl, identified only as "Scout No. 41," said she and other Scouts also smuggled cakes and fruit to the supposedly doomed men. With bright eyes and a wide smile, she nodded and answered, "Yes, yes," to all questions, except the method of smuggling the food.

"That's a secret," she said.

Foreigners Cheer Battalion.

Foreigners who crowded along the International Settlement barricade cheered the Chinese soldiers—all members of "Chiang's Own," crack soldiers of the eighty-ninth division, who have sworn an oath to die rather than surrender to the Japanese.

Witnesses said British and American soldiers assisted in passing food over the narrow "no man's land" to the warehouse.

Hitler Plan Hinted To Regain Empire

Munich, Germany, Oct. 29 (AP).—Gen. Franz von Epp, governor of Bavaria, indicated today that Chancellor Adolf Hitler has some definite move in mind toward solution of Germany's colonial problem.

(Hitler for some time has been stressing the contention that the Reich must have colonies.)

Gen. Epp, speaking before a joint meeting of the Epp Colonial Society and the German Academy of Law, said the task of the legal committee and his society regarding the colonial question was co-operation "to prepare the way for a future act of Der Fuehrer which will prove a happy solution for the colonial problem."

Let Italy Alone, Duce Says Before Peasants

Rome, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Premier Mussolini, addressing thousands of peasants at the inauguration of the fourth rural town to rise on the reclaimed land of the Pontine Marshes, told the world today to "let the Italian people alone."

Il Duce, formally dedicating the Town of Aprilia on the beginning of the sixteenth year of the Fascist era, asserted that "the Italian people desire to be left alone to their intense work, both in the motherland and the empire."

3 Britons Slain, Bullets Riddle U. S. Hospital

Anglo-Japanese Tension Is High as Shells Fall in Settlement.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 30.—Japanese and Chinese fought to the death on the borders of the foreign areas of Shanghai today despite the fact stray shells from their batteries have killed four British soldiers and wounded at least nine others, bringing stern warnings from the British high command.

Three British soldiers were killed and seven wounded yesterday by badly aimed shells, allegedly Japanese, which wiped out a British army outpost on the western edge of the International Settlement. One British soldier was killed earlier in this week.

Scores of Americans and other foreigners were endangered by explosives which rained on scattered areas of the International Settlement and the French Concession.

Frantic protests from representatives of the powers were ignored by the leaders of the contending armies—locked in the seventy-sixth day of the bloody struggle for the control of this great international city and the Yangtze River delta.

An American hospital was machine-gunned and had to be abandoned.

The homes of British, Italians and other foreigners were hit and those of many Americans endangered.

Nearly all of Shanghai again was engulfed in the roar and smoke of war as Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui, Japanese commander, threw thousands of fresh troops into the second phase of his great offensive designed to crush an estimated 350,000 Chinese soldiers remaining on the western and southern fringes of the city.

In the Chapei area China's famed "doomed battalion" held out grimly in two shell-pitted warehouses within a stone's throw of the Anglo-American defense lines.

Lynch Mobs Riot.

Police were having difficulty in controlling Chinese mobs in the International Settlement.

One mob, in Sinza road, lynched a Chinese employe of the municipal government, Zing Wong-ting, mistaking him for a Japanese. The man, formerly a student in Germany, was beaten to death.

British blamed the Japanese for most of the explosives falling in the International Settlement, and Anglo-Japanese tension was high.

Japanese airplanes bombed Chinese troop and munition trains in Sunkiang, Soochow and other cities in the Shanghai area, causing great loss of life and destruction. An American Methodist mission and American homes in Sunkiang were reported destroyed by 20 Japanese air raiders.

Japanese were closing in on Taiyuan-Fu, capital of Shansi Province, completing their conquest of North China, and were attacking with everything they had at Shanghai in a mighty effort to confront the Nine-Power Conference which convenes at Brussels November 3, with an overwhelming series of Japanese victories.

Japan Sets Up Inner Mongolia Puppet State

Suiyuan-Chahar Area to Be Ruled by Prince Teh From 'Hoho.'

By the Associated Press.

Peiping, Oct. 29.—Foundation of an "Inner Mongolian Nation," divorced from China and under the protection of the Japanese army, was proclaimed today at Kweisui, capital of Japanese-conquered Suiyuan Province.

The birth of the new state was announced at the conclusion of a three-day session of a "national assembly" of 500 Inner Mongolian delegates from China's two Inner Mongolian provinces, Suiyuan and Chahar, both under Japanese control.

(Apparently the new state will not include the other three North China provinces—Hopei, conquest of which has been completed, and Shansi and Shantung, into which Japanese are advancing.)

Prince Teh, Mongol chieftain associated for years with Japanese expansionist schemes in the Chinese Northwest, was named head of the new "nation." Previously he had been, under Japanese tutelage, head of a smaller Mongol regime in northern Chahar and eastern Suiyuan.

The assembly announced the name of Kweisui, which will be the capital, was changed to Hoho, said by Mongols to be a restoration of the ancient Mongol name for the twin cities of Kweisui and Suiyuancheng, on the Peiping-Suiyuan railway some 350 miles west of Peiping. The change was said to symbolize liberation of the Mongols from so-called centuries of Chinese oppression.

Previously the delegates voted to restore the Mongol calendar, in which the year 1 is 1206, beginning of the reign of Genghis Khan, great Mongol conqueror.

French Cousins Welcome Bullitt At Ancestral City

Nimes, France, Oct. 29 (AP).—The white-bearded mayor and hundreds of citizens of this picturesque town of southern France tonight welcomed William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, back to the home of his ancestors.

Greeters stopped his car on the highway outside the town and the ambassador was introduced to a number of Frenchmen named Boulet, who explained they believed they were "very distant" cousins.

Bullitt came at the invitation of Mayor Hubert Rouger and the town council, who are staging a week-end celebration of the 300th anniversary of the emigration of Bullitt's ancestors from France to America.

Chamberlain, Ill, Confers on Shanghai Crisis

May Reinforce Garrison; 3 Deaths Enrage Britain; 'War!' Shouted.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

London, Oct. 29.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain consulted with cabinet ministers from a sick bed tonight on the necessity of dispatching troop reinforcements to the Shanghai war zone as result of the wiping out of a British outpost by Japanese artillery.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden conferred lengthily by telephone with Chamberlain and was believed to have proposed an immediate protest to the Tokyo government. In informed quarters it was said an apology from Japan would not be considered sufficient satisfaction for the incident.

The government, calling for a detailed report of the shelling, in which three soldiers were killed, sent its indorsement of orders to the British garrison to fire on the Japanese if the British positions are menaced.

Anger Is Aroused.

Circles close to Eden said the killing of the Britons "gravely aggravates Japan's position with Great Britain."

Anger against the Japanese, steadily rising since machine-gunning by Japanese airplanes wounded Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, British ambassador to China, was widespread in government and parliamentary circles.

[The House of Commons had adjourned for the week-end before news of the latest casualties was received, but past incidents already had been made the basis of demands for a retaliatory trade boycott against Japan, the Associated Press reported.

[Laborite Tom Williams urged application of sanctions and the opposition Liberal, R. T. D. Acland, caused a minor uproar when he demanded the Brussels conference on the conflict impose the boycott "if necessary supported by force."

"War!" Is Shouted.

["War! war!" came the angry shouts from the Conservative benches while cheers rose from the opposition.

[A formal Labor motion of lack of confidence was moved against the government by Herbert Morrison, a Labor party leader, charging the cabinet was pursuing an isolationist policy and "running the risk of drifting into a first class war against a first class power."

[Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, told Morrison the government was trying to "avoid the division of the world into two hostile camps," and announced Eden would reply to the Labor motion 'completely" at Monday's sessions—Editor's note.]

Paris, Oct. 29.—A high Chinese authority said tonight acceptance of peace terms outlined yesterday by a Japanese spokesman would "be a betrayal of the Chinese people and the beginning of complete dismemberment of China."

The Chinese spokesman said both major proposals—temporary occupation of China's five northern provinces by Japan and creation of an international zone about Shanghai—were out of the question.

He said the idea of Japan's occupying the northern provinces of Hopei, Chahar, Shansi, Suiyuan and Shantung—constituted a major objective in Japan's program of expansion on the Asiatic mainland.

The proposal to create a neutral zone about Shanghai, maintained by international police, would be a violation of the administrative integrity of China, the spokesman said.

Germany Refuses Bid.

Brussels, Oct. 29 (AP).—Diplomats today expressed belief there was still a good possibility the conference on the Sino-Japanese war would evolve some acceptable peace plan despite Japanese and German refusal to participate.

Germany's decision not to accept the Belgian invitation for the November 3 meeting because she was not a signatory of the 1932 agreement to respect China's territorial integrity was received today.

IMMACULATE and usually smooth-shaven Marvin Jones, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, startled colleagues yesterday by presiding at a committee meeting behind a week's growth of beard.

Fellow members feared Jones was taking the new farm bill too seriously and deliberately cultivating local color.

Diplomatically questioned, the chairman denied he was starting a back to the farm and down with the razor movement.

If he looked like a dirt farmer, Jones said, members could blame it on too close an interest in nature on a recent trip through the Texas brush. To be specific, it was poison ivy, and doctors had forbidden him to shave.

JOBS OF 600 workers were saved by President Roosevelt yesterday when he transferred the personnel of the PWA housing division to the new United States Housing Authority, headed by Nathan Straus. Since PWA activities are being curtailed, the housing division employes had been fearful of being dismissed. The President's order also transferred to USHA 49 of the 51 low-cost housing projects of the PWA, of which 22 are already completed, and for which allotments of some $134,000,000 have been made. Two housing projects in Puerto Rico will remain under control of the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration.

"THE RIVER," Farm Security Administration documentary film dramatizing the effects of floods, deforestation and soil erosion in the Mississippi Valley, had its first public showing last night in the Strand Theater, New Orleans.

Plans are being made for national release to begin with a gala premiere in Washington at a date to be announced later. Pare Lorentz, author and director of the documentary musical film, "The Plow That Broke the Plains."

"The River," like "The Plow That Broke the Plains," is a documentary musical film. Whereas, "The Plow" portrayed the disastrous effects of drought and dust storms, "The River" dramatizes the results of floods, forest land depletion and exhaustion of soil fertility through misuse and unchecked erosion.

A special musical score, based on native American airs, was written by Virgil Thomson. The score was played by musicians from the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Alexander Smallens.

Foreign Legion Jails 300 Arabs In Revolt at Fez

Italy Hinted as Supporter of Plot to Overthrow Native Ruler.

By the United Press.

Fez, Morocco, Oct. 29.—Three hundred Arab nationalists were driven out of the mosque attached to Karouyine University late tonight by Arab police to be placed under arrest by soldiers of the famed French Foreign Legion.

About a score of the nationalists, allegedly involved in an insurrection plot against the French, were wounded, six of them seriously.

Police used blackjacks to drive them out of the mosque, where they had barricaded themselves, and some hand grenades were exploded in the melee.

Other disorders occurred in the streets at scattered points. Legionnaires patrolled the city. Machine-guns were set up at all strategic points.

French authorities alleged that the anti-French disorders, aimed also at overthrowing the Sultan of Morocco, were supported by a "European totalitarian power," supposedly Italy.

Military authorities said the revolt was planned to spread throughout Morocco and that Nationalist leaders planned a coup d'etat to seize control.

Jerusalem, Oct. 29 (AP).—One Jew was killed and three wounded today in new outbreaks of terrorism in the Holy Land. British authorities clamped down curfew restrictions again. A truckload of Jewish laborers was ambushed near the Rockefeller Museum, outside of Herod's Gate, but only one was wounded. In the second attack, near the Wailing Wall, one Jew fell dead and two others were wounded.

Parley on Spain Ends in Failure; Rebels Halted

Volunteer Issue Returned to 27-Nation Group as Reds, Fascists Quarrel.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 29.—Rising anger between Russia and the Nazi-Fascist bloc shattered negotiations on the withdrawal of foreign "volunteers" from Spain tonight and sent the problem back to 27 nations of the nonintervention committe that has failed in repeated efforts to "quarantine" the Spanish conflict.

Russia's refusal to consent to belligerency rights for the Spanish loyalists and nationalists and Italo-German efforts to drive the Russians into diplomatic isolation brought the delegates of nine nations to an impasse after hours of wrangling.

Biggest Liquor Seizure Made Since Repeal

2 Men, Women Seized by Vice Squad; Source Is Traced to Maryland.

District detectives yesterday seized 315 gallons of alleged corn whisky, two men and a woman in what they described as the largest haul of illicit beverages made here since repeal.

Sergt. George Deyoe and his men of the vice squad uncovered the big cache of liquor after they arrested Joseph F. Nesline, 24, of 656 Morton street northwest, and charged him with violating the liquor tax act when they said they found eight 5-gallon cans of alleged corn liquor in his automobile. He was arrested at Seventh street and Florida avenue northwest.

Tracing Nesline's movements, the detectives said, led them to a garage in the rear of the 5600 block Fourteenth street northwest. There Detectives William McEwen, Samuel Smith and Melvin Kite said they found 35 cans containing 175 gallons of the alleged illicit spirits.

Arrest Man and Wife.

Detectives said while they were in the garage a man and his wife and their 2-year-old baby rolled up in an expensive automobile which contained 20 more 5-gallon cans of the same type of alleged firewater. Maryland tags on the car led police to believe the huge liquor supply recently flooding Washington had been coming from Baltimore stills.

Ralph Marcontini, 36, and his wife, Constance, 30, both of Baltimore, were arrested and charged with violating the liquor-tax act. Bond of $1,000 was set for Marcontini, and his wife was released under bond of $500 when they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Deyoe said he recognized Nesline while he was cruising with McEwen, and followed him until he stopped for a red light. He said McEwen leaped from the police car and caught Nesline when he attempted to flee.

Supply for Cheap Saloons.

Capt. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, said his men have been searching for the source of the large amount of bootleg whisky that has been sold here for several weeks. Yesterday's haul, he said, probably was the main supply of liquor for cheap saloons "where the drinkers have failed to cultivate a taste for legal liquors."

Thursday night Deyoe and other vice squadsmen unearthed two stills in a house in the 1000 block of Sixteenth street northwest. The stills, one of ten-gallon capacity, the other with a five-gallon output, were running full blast, the detectives said, but were unattended.

They confiscated the stills and destroyed 77 gallons of mash, they reported.

Dog Auction Aid To Thieves, Patent Expert Charges

A charge that the Dog Mart in Fredericksburg is affording an opportunity to thieves was voiced yesterday by Alvin Edward Moore, an examiner in the Bureau of Patents here, in complaining of the loss of a terrier. He said dog stealing was "akin to kidnaping."

Moore said his dog, named Buck, disappeared two days before the annual Dog Mart was held and he believed the dog was sold on the auction block. B. T. Pitts, president of the Fredericksburg Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the event, said that complaints had reached him from persons in Caroline County. His organization, he said, knew of no way to correct the situation. He said it was the first year there had been such complaints.

The Dog Mart is based on a traditi highly-trained one. "It could walk as far as 50 feet on its hind legs," he related. He described the dog as part bull terrior and part fox terrier, white and black and with a full chest.

At Fredericksburg, County Game Warden D. C. Smith said that persons "travelling mostly by night" are buying and selling dogs in the county.

he Dog Mart is based on a tradition around Fredericksburg. In the seventeenth century, Indians would come to the settlement and trade their good bear and deer hunting dogs for strings of beads and perhaps the tamer dogs of the settlement. In 1927 the chamber of commerce revived the Mart as a civic enterprise, and once a year it attracts large crowds.

Anton Brees at the keyboard of the Luray singing tower.

By the Associated Press.

Luray, Va., Oct. 29.—Despite a poring rain, a crowd estimated at more than one thousand persons, heard a trial recital last night of the Singing Tower now under construction here.

The recital opened with two hymns, dedicated to Mrs. Brown Northcott, in whose memory Col. Theodore Northcott is giving the carillon to Luray. The recital closed with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Recitals have been announced through November 25, although the date of the dedication has not been set. Anton Brees, carillonneur of the Box Tower, will play at all recitals.

Receivers Rush New Payments On D. C. Banks

O'Connor's Forecast of Millions to Depositors Spurs on Work.

Spurred on by Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor's public revelation that Washington's closed banks are likely to pay nearly $8,000,000 in additional dividends to depositors, receivers for the 16 institutions yesterday were working at top speed to make available the new payments.

Although Treasury officials last night refused to make any prediction as to the date of further possible dividends, depositors were already making plans for conversion of their original investments into Christmas gifts and 1938 model autos.

Speaking before the National Woman's Democratic Club, O'Connor declared that $29,298,256 has already been paid off to depositors and that additional recoveries should aggregate $7,970,415, reaching a total of 90.9 per cent of the original deposits.

The average percentage of expense of liquidation, the Comptroller pointed out, is only 6.8 per cent of total collections. He added that loans totalling $14,408,583 had been obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to aid in the liquidation and that all but $1,071,048 of this sum has been repaid.

Citing the payment to depositors of the Chevy Chase Savings Bank of 108 per cent of their original investment and the 100 per cent return to depositors in the Woodridge-Langdon Savings and Commercial Bank, O'Connor predicted that at least two of the 16 banks still in active receivership would shortly pay off 100 per cent or more. The United States Savings Bank was generally assumed to be one of the institutions to which O'Connor referred.

Receivers for the 16 defunct banks yesterday reported varying degrees of progress in liquidation, but emphasized that calls from impatient depositors for information as to the exact date and amount of further payments could only delay their work.

A representative of the receiver for the Federal-American Bank stated last night that 65 per cent of its $9,000,000 of unsecured deposits had been paid off and that an additional payment could be expected. The same receiver, liquidating the Commercial National Bank, has returned 60 cents on the dollar to depositors and hopes to increase that figure.

New Compound Cures Sterility In Five Men and Three Women

Rush Medical College Gave Two 'Brain' Hormones to 20 Men Unable for Years to Become Fathers; One of Chemicals Used Is on Market.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The cure of sterility in five men and three women by new ways of using three chemicals, hormones, all from the pituitary gland at the base of the brain, was reported to the American College of Surgeons here today.

One of these hormones is on the market, another was first reported two weeks ago and is not available to the public, and the third was announced today. All are part of a new and recent attack on the problems of human sterility.

They were described in Symposia, which told surgeons of the "practical" side of endocrine medicine, its dangers and the disappointments which most persons must expect when they ask doctors for these new medicines.

At Rush Medical College, Chicago, in the last 12 months, said Dr. N. J. Heckel, 20 men, unable for years to become fathers, have been given two of the "brain" hormones. Five are today prospective parents.

Eight of the 20 were given a hormone already on the market, which is obtained from pregnant women. Its medical name is the "Gonadotropiclike" hormone. This means it is a chemical originating in the pituitary gland and influencing sex development. Two of the eight were cured of sterility.

Twelve men were given a new hormone extracted directly from the pituitary glands of sheep. Three of these men are now expectant fathers.

Whether the sheep hormone would work on the men for whom the woman hormone failed, and vice versa, has not been determined. The sheep hormone is still a laboratory product and is neither on the market nor available to medical practitioners generally.

Dr. Heckel said these two experiments indicate that among the many men for whose sterility nothing has been available, it is possible in some cases to obtain relief.

The third hormone, for women, was announed at Dallas two weeks ago at a meeting of the Central Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. It comes from the serum of pregnant mares.

The surgeons were informed that it has been tried on about 75 women and 3 are expectant mothers. Twenty-two or 23 others are for the first time possibly able to have children, while the hormone was a failure on the remainder.

This hormone is not new, the surgeons were told, but its human application is new. It is not on the market nor available to the medical profession.

Snowstorm Blamed In Airliner's Crash

The crash of a transcontinental airliner April 3 near McNary, Ariz., in which eight persons died, probably was caused by "unexpectedly severe local snow squalls," Fred D. Fagg, director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, said yesterday.

The plane, under Dutch registry, was being flown from Burbank, Calif., to New York for export to the Netherlands.

In its report, the Bureau of Air Commerce pointed out that no word was received from the aircraft after it passed over a lumber camp near McNary, where the snowstorms were encountered.

"The pilot appears to have used poor judgment in continuing too far into the snowstorm," the report added.

New York Vote Fraud Arrests Reach 330 Total

Grand Jury in Extra Session; Gov. Lehman Speaks for Mahoney Slate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—A vigorous campaign against illegal registration swept through New York tonight as Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and his Democratic opponent, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, mustered their forces for a final election drive.

Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., announced the return of 19 grand jury indictments in Kings County (Brooklyn) for false registration. In Manhattan, he said, 21 new warrants charging similar violations were signed, bringing the total arrests ordered to 330.

Charges of attempts at wholesale registration of nonresident voters came from both parties in the campaign. In Manhattan alone the challenge list totaled 1,176. Police in Brooklyn had under investigation 1,000 new complaints, and the grand jury was ordered into extra session to hear their reports.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman took the stump in Brooklyn for the Mahoney candidates.

His appearance, after personal indorsement of the Mahoney slate, brought into the campaign the last of the outstanding State and National Democratic leaders in New York.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, appeared on the Mahoney-for-Mayor program with Gov. Lehman.

Both men had appeared previously for the Democratic candidates, and both repeated their pleas for the election of their party's municipal slates to back up the Democratic administrations in Albany and Washington.

The Mayor, Fusion-Progressive-American Labor candidate, speaking with Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for New York County District Attorney, at a meeting of Wall Street business leaders, said he expected to see a number of Tammany leaders "take it on the run for Canada or Cuba, or some country with which we have no extradition treaty, after the first of January."

In another of his "lessons on good municipal government" LaGuardia said that he had kept a promise made four years ago that "nobody would starve while I was mayor."

Traffic Crusader Is Fined $50 for Reckless Driving

Alexander J. Montgomery, American Automobile Association traffic crusader, was fined $50 in Police Court yesterday when he was arraigned before Judge Robert Newman.

Montgomery was arrested last Sunday following a collision between his machine and that of a former chauffeur near Thirtieth and Albermarle streets northwest.

At the time of the accident, Montgomery was charged with driving while drunk and colliding. After interviewing several witnesses, Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch issued the reckless driving charge. He stated there was insufficient evidence to support the two original charges.

California Court Rules Today on Mooney Plea

San Francisco, Oct. 29 (AP).—Chief Justice William H. Waste said tonight the California State Supreme Court would announce its decision tomorrow on the habeas corpus petition of Thomas J. Mooney. Mooney, convicted with Warren K. Billings for the 1916 Preparedness Day parade bombing here, is serving a life sentence. He contended he was convicted through perjured testimony.

Germans Erect Plant For Purifying Helium

Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Zeppelin Co. today ordered a helium-purifying plant built here, to be ready when the new Zeppelin, No. 130, takes the air next spring for her maiden voyage at Lakehurst, N. J.

Helium will periodically be emptied from the airship containers, purified and used again. Helium, which must be purchased from the United States, is expensive.

Mrs. Guggenheim and Jockey Tell of Attack After Party

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

After receiving medical attention, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Guggenheim, recently divorced heiress, and her escort, John Frey, jr., were pictured as they went to a police station to report how they were beaten and robbed of $300 following a visit to a Queens Village, N. Y., night club.

Claim They Were Beaten and Robbed Near 'Lipstick Lane;' Horsewoman With Them Says Divorcee Hit Her Chin on Table, Escort Spent Her Money.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Police were baffled tonight over the case of Mrs. Elizabeth Eaton Guggenheim, divorced wife of the copper heir, and Jim Fry, jr., horse trainer, who said they were beaten by robbers early today near the scene of the "lipstick" murders of several weeks ago.

What happened, police weren't sure, but the results were that the prominent 35-year-old horsewoman suffered a gash on her chin; Fry, 23, a gash on his head, and $300 was taken from Mrs. Guggenheim's pocketbook.

Mrs. Guggenheim was divorced in Reno Tuesday from Col. Robert Guggenheim, son of the late Daniel Guggenheim, mining heir.

Fry, Mrs. Bessie Upjohn, a former noted horsewoman, and a man identified as "Paul" drove to Cleveland yesterday to meet Mar. Guggenheim on her return from Reno. They came here and there was a party at a Queens Village restaurant. Fry and Mrs. Guggenheim said they were attacked by two husky men as they left the restaurant. Fry said he was struck on the head and kicked and Mrs. Guggenheim was struck on the chin and knocked unconscious.

Bleeding from injuries, they drove to a diner, where they were met by a policeman and taken to a hospital.

Mrs. Upjohn told an investigator from the district attorney's office she knew nothing of the assault.

"In the excitement of the party," Mrs. Upjohn was quoted as saying, "there was much dancing and frivolity. Elizabeth fell and opened her chin on a table. That accounts for her injury.

"Jack Fry was rather playful and a little scrappy with some of the other men in the party, and I know that he took some bad falls which he didn't seem to mind at the time but which I knew were quite serious."

Mrs. Upjohn said Fry ran out of money at the party, took some from Mrs. Guggenheim's pocketbook and "began to fling it around like a drunken sailor."

Fry rides Mrs. Guggenheim's horses in blue ribbon contests.

Lewis Weiss and Frances Hajek, young lovers, were slain in a wooded section in Queens October 2. The killer left circles in lipstick on their foreheads.

Mrs. Hahn to Testify In Trial for Poisoning

Cincinnati, Oct. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn will testify in her own behalf, her attorneys announced tonight, as they mapped their defense against a State's demand that she pay with her life for the alleged poison slaying of Jacob Wagner, 78. The prosecution rested its murder case today, completing evidence offered to show that Wagner and three other elderly men died in agony, of poison administered by her.

Special services at the Takoma Park (Md.) Presbyterian Church, Maple and Tulip avenues, will be held tomorrow to observe the centennial anniversary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

The interest is so keen in Takoma Park because the organizer of the original board is the great-grandfather of Mrs. Dudley C. Jackson, of 33 Columbia avenue. He is the late Dr. Elisha P. Swift. The service will be held at 4:30 in the church hall, when a drama will be given entitled "God and Elisha Swift." The material for the play is based on correspondence of Mr. Swift, which is now in possession of his great-granddaughter. Many properties to be used in the stage setting are from the Swift home and also property of Mrs. Jackson.

Those who will appear in the play include Mrs. Perry O. Huff, Mrs. C. Dwight Avery, Miss Jean Rowley, Mrs. Dudley C. Jackson, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Mrs. Edmund H. Fraser, Hugh M. Smythe and Will H. Carlton. The costumes and properties are being arranged by Mrs. S. E. Widdifield. Jacob H. Vogel is in charge of the setting and lighting.

An exhibit of Swift heirlooms will be on display before and after the service in the assembly room of the basement.

Dr. Robert E. Speer, a former moderator of the general assembly, now retired as secretary of the board of missions after serving that position for 46 years, will be the guest speaker.

The service will be held under the auspices of the Woman's Society of the church, the president of which, Mrs. Fred S. Wilson, will preside.

Foundry Church Owes Origin To British Threat of Invasion

Owner of Gun Factory Took Oath in 1814 to Erect Edifice in Gratitude to God if Enemy Was Checked; Storm Discouraged Army.

Of all Washington's historic churches, Foundry M. E. boasts the most romantic origin. It owes its existence to a pious Georgtown resident of the last century named Henry Foxall. Foxall owned a foundry which, tradition has it, supplied the guns with which the American fleet won its victories on Lake Erie.

When the British entered Washington following the Battle of Bladensburg, in 1814, his foundry was among the buildings they intended to destroy. Hearing of their plan for vengeance, Foxall took an oath that if God would protect the foundry, he would erect a church in gratitude.

On August 26, the date set for the attack, a terrific storm arose and discouraged the invaders. The foundry was spared and Foxall purchased a lot at Fourteenth and G streets, where a year later he built the original of the present structure.

It was at first suggested that the new church be named in honor of its donor, but Foxall declared his gift was a memorial to God, not to himself. When the name Foundry was suggested instead, Foxall is said to have replied, "I accept that name, but not as any compliment to myself. It shall be called so in honor of the Foundry in London, Wesley's first church."

The new building was completed in 1903 and is situated at Sixteenth street and P streets northwest. The present pastor is the Rev. Frederick Harris Brown, D. D. Wesley Chapel and McKendree M. E. both are daughters of Foundry, so Foxall did more for Methodism than he ever knew.

Foundry was the scene of a service held ten years ago to consecrate the Japanese cherry trees. State Department representatives and the Japanese Ambassador attended the service, the theme of which was the international amity symbolized by the cherry blossoms.

The Anti-Saloon League of America was formed in the church. Among the Presidents who attended Foundry regularly were Hayes and McKinley. Speaker Joe Cannon also attended. President Wilson once delivered an address on Francis Asbury from Foundry's pulpit. A recently discovered certificate bears out the tradition that Lincoln was made a life member of its missionary society.

Science Churches Announce Lesson

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Psalms 94:12: "Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest, O Lord, and teachest him out of thy law."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Wherefore doth a living man complain, a man for the punishment of his sins?" (Lamentations 3:39.)

The lesson-sermon also contains the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "To remit the penalty due for sin, would be for truth to pardon error. Escape from punishment is not in accordance with God's government, since justice is the handmaid of mercy."

Mills Leaves Bulk of Fortune To His Widow

D. C. Cathedral, Harvard Among Institutions Getting Funds.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Ogden L. Treasury, who died October 11, Mills, former Secretary of the left the bulk of his vast family fortune to his widow in a will filed for probate today. No estimate was made of the estate's value.

Exercising a power of appointment over a trust fund left by his father, Ogden Mills, sr., Mills bequeathed $200,000 each to Harvard College and the New York Home for Incurables; $100,000 to the Metropolitan Museum of Art; and $25,000 each to the Charity Organization Society of New York and to the National Cathedral in Washington.

Dated August 6, 1935, the will stipulated that Mrs. Mills will receive the residuary income from the estate during her lifetime, with the exception of $10,000 annaully to George Winthrop Sands, and $5,000 annually to Mrs. George R. Burgess, the former Anne Barbara Sands. Both were wards of Mr. and Mrs. Mills.

Upon the death of Mrs. Mills, $250,000 of the residuary principal is to be paid to Mrs. Burgess or her issue, and the balance held in trust and the income divided equally between Sands and Mills' three step-children, John R. Fell, Philip S. Fell, and Mrs. Howell van Gerbig (Dorothy Fell.)

Mills left his interest in the Wheatley stables, one of the oldest and finest racing stables in New York, to his sister, Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, who had been a joint owner with him.

Beyond the bequests contained in the will, Mills said he had no desire to exercise his right to dispose of the rest of the principal of his father's trust.

Apartment Dwellers Flee Blaze in Cellar

Smoke pouring from the cellar yesterday afternoon frightened many of the 320 families living at the Park Central Apartments, 1900 F street northwest. Many fled to the street.

Answering an alarm, Battalion Chief H. B. Barker and the second battalion discovered a wooden partition near an incinerator was ablaze. The fire was extinguished before serious damage was done.

Back In The Lap Of Congress.

Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker's suggestion that the Government purchase and improve Washington Airport has been followed by an announcement from Representative Smith that he will again press for approval of his bill to create a modern air terminal at Gravelly Point. Together these moves serve as a reminder that the whole problem of providing a safe landing field for Washington will again be dumped into the lap of Congress when it reassembles next month.

The 10-year controversy has now become the 11-year dilemma. Still no generally satisfactory solution is in sight. Capt. Rickenbacker's plea for Washington Airport is offset by reports that a majority of the pilots flying in this area favor abandonment of that terminus and transfer of airline operations to Bolling Field. Hope of securing a complete meeting of minds as to what should be done has become very dim indeed.

On one subject, however, there is agreement. The present airport is totally inadequate to serve the long-term needs of the National Capital. Therefore it is up to Congress to make a definite decision as to the location of a permanent airport and thus bring the controversy to a belated close. There has been enough of sidestepping, delay, evasion and temporizing.

Unless Congress is willing to admit incompetence to deal with such local problems it should settle the issue early in the 1938 session. Otherwise, there is grave danger that Washington will be ruled off the country's most important air maps.

Untimely Sterilization.

Several months ago the Administration decided that commodity prices were rising too rapidly and took steps to check what it considered to be an inflationary tendency. It is true that action came somewhat too late and too suddenly, and that the measures taken were somewhat too strong. But that is the way government frequently works.

The first step was to double the required reserves of the Federal Reserve member banks. The second, to sterilize the gold which was flowing into the country in large amounts. Since then the policy has been partially reversed by the desterilization of $300,000,000 in gold and by some purchases of Government bonds by the Federal Reserve banks.

In view of the fact that sterilization was undertaken as part of a program to stem what was regarded as an over-rapid rise in prices, it seems pertinent to ask why this policy should be continued under present changed conditions. In other words, why should the Treasury continue to sterilize gold, with a resultant increase in the public debt, instead of allowing it to come into the country in the normal way and flow into the financial system?

If commodity prices again began to rise too rapidly following this "return to normalcy," sterilization could once more be applied, assuming it seemed advisable. That would mean no more manipulation of monetary policy than we have at present.

Parents And Tuberculosis.

Soon Washingtonians will be sticking Christmas seals to their mail. Thus, once a year, the city does its bit to support the campaign against tuberculosis. Those commissioned to carry on the actual fight, however, wage a year-round battle. For example, this week the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association began its third annual program in the schools.

Permission having been received from the Board of Education, principals of all Washington public and parochial high schools as well as the two teachers colleges were asked to arrange dates on which the association's tuberculin-test and X-ray program might be explained to students. The Health Department, while maintaining 18 part-time medical inspectors in the schools throughout the year, has not the funds to subject students to tuberculosis examinations. So the Tuberculosis Association will render that service, confining its scope to seniors because of limited facilities.

The examinations are free and in no wise compulsory; written consent of parents is required in each case. But, sad to say, not all parents co-operate. During the past two years permission has been obtained to examine only about one-half the senior class enrollments.

Washington has the second highest tuberculosis death rate in the United States. Since the disease is communicable, this alone should insure eager responses to proffered examinations. In addition, 17-year-olds are known by statistics to be entering the most susceptible period of their lives. Failure to allow them to be examined verges on criminal neglect of parental responsibility.

Berry's Wages-And-Hours Bill.

Apart from the enforcement problems and the constitutional issues that would arise under Government regulation of wages and hours, there are serious economic objections to Federal control over employer-employe relationships.

The measure which Senator Berry is preparing to offer as a substitute for the pending Black-Connery wages-and-hours bill is particularly open to criticism on economic grounds. It provides for a statutory maximum work week and a statutory minimum hourly rate of pay, without provision for reasonable exceptions. No enforcement agency would be created but the Department of Justice would, upon complaint, prosecute those who violated the law.

However reasonable rigid standards embodied in legislation may seem to be, they would undoubtedly work hardship and result in loss of employment if suddenly applied to all industries throughout the country. To set a rigid lower limit to wages and an inflexible upper limit to the number of working hours would result in the elimination of sectional differences that have played a large part in determining the location of certain industries.

At least such would be the case unless the longest prevailing hours and lowest pay were accepted as the national standards. Furthermore, industry would be kept in a state of perpetual unrest by political agitation for changes in statutory rates of pay and hours of work.

The Black-Connery bill, as passed by the Senate, would permit a Labor Standards Board to adjust wage and hour requirements to the varying needs of industries and localities, within certain statutory limitations. That is, the board could not raise minimum wage rates above 40 cents per hour nor reduce hours of work below 40 per week.

But it would be permitted to set lower wages and decree longer hours in order to save industry from shocks and dislocations that would result from sudden increases in labor costs. If Federal regulation of wages and hours should be undertaken, therefore, regulation by administrative decree is unquestionably preferable to application of fixed standards.

However, Senator Berry's proposals are in line with the suggestions of William Green and John L. Lewis, who fear that a Federal wage-fixing board might interfere with labor's efforts to obtain better terms by independent collective bargaining. Legislative wage-fixing does tend to weaken free unionism, but the danger is quite as great when minimum standards are set by statute as when variations are permitted through the exercise of official discretion. Moreover, the indiscriminate enforcement of fixed minimum standards might necessitate curtailment of industrial operations and indirectly, if not directly, injure organized labor.

If the purpose of regulating wages and hours is simply to protect the weak against exploitation, Federal legislation does not meet the need, because large groups of workers would be exempt from its provisions. State minimum wage laws not only provide a surer means of reaching those who need protection, but State laws would also make more allowance for differences in local conditions. The problems of administration would likewise be greatly simplified. As a matter of fact, half the States already have minimum wage laws applicable to women and present trends indicate that other States will rapidly fall into line.

Thus for workers in need of legal protection against employer exploitation, the State rather than the Federal Government is the logical guardian. And for the nonexploited groups there is no need for legislative interference. Organized labor can obtain for itself, through collective bargaining, the rewards to which it is entitled.

The Railroad Situation.

Preliminary reports from the railroads for September indicate a decline in net operating revenue for that month of about 10 per cent below a year ago. This rate of decline was a good deal less than that for August, in spite of the fact that gross income for September was not as favorable, compared to the same period in 1936, as it was in August.

But how has this slump in net revenue been checked? That achievement resulted from a radical slashing of expenditures which has involved a reduction of employment from mid-July to mid-September of about 41,000 men. Since then, it is understood, dismissals have increased very largely, probably more than doubled. The exact figure is still undetermined.

The failure of the majority members of the Interstate Commerce Commission to grapple realistically with the freight rate problem constitutes one of the most unfortunate illustrations of Government control of industry that we have had in recent years. And it must be accepted as a fact that the squeeze between reduction of rates last December and the increase of wages and other expenditures has cost the country, in terms of business stability, far in excess of the amount of railroad revenue directly involved.

Comfort may be taken from the declarations in the recent I. C. C. decision which invite further applications for rate increases. But if such increases are to be definitely agreed to only after 12 months' delay, as in the case just decided, the outlook for the railroad industry must be considered gloomy.

As a factor in general industry the railroads are so important that efforts to maintain reasonable recovery, to balance the budget, or to stabilize employment of labor, appear futile if the railroad industry, over which the Government has so large a measure of control, cannot be kept on a basis of reasonable prosperity.

A Helping Hand To Hitler.

In his speech commemorating the fifteenth anniversary of the march on Rome, Mussolini aligned himself squarely on the side of Hitler in demanding colonies for the Third Reich.

The Duce's gesture of support will, no doubt, gratify the Fuehrer as a demonstration of the unity of purpose of the Berlin-Rome axis. But whether it will have any practical effect in bringing about a redistribution of colonial territories in Germany's favor is by no means certain.

Italy, herself, clearly has no colonies to give away. Neither Great Britain, France nor, for that matter, any other nation that fell heir to Germany's pre-war colonies, has shown the slightest disposition to relinquish them. The attitude in each case has been and remains that of the British conservatives who, when they suspected that Stanley Baldwin was inclined to give ear to the German colonial demands, wired him: "What we have we hold."

For bargaining purposes, however, the Italo-German united front on colonies has some potential value. It can be used by each of the Fascist powers or both as a means of putting pressure on the democracies of western Europe to get concessions out of them.

The real danger to the colonial powers from the totalitarian states is not that they may soon be compelled to relinquish their African holdings to the Third Reich but that the dictators may, by encouraging discontent and rebellion in those colonies, create serious difficulties for the nations in possession. There appears to be no doubt that Mussolini, who on his recent Libyan tour announced himself as "protector of Islam," has been one of the factors behind the Arab agitation in Palestine. Now the French suspect that the latest outbreak of disorders in French Morocco is attributable, in part at least, to the same source.

To meet the threat of revolt both Great Britain and France have found it necessary to take strong measures. In Palestine Arab terrorism is being put down with an iron hand. And in French Morocco the authorities have established something approximating martial law. But such measures actually deal with the problem along the periphery and not at its source.

The root issue is the balance of power in the Mediterranean and that problem shows no signs of being solved. On the contrary, the weak-kneed attitude of Great Britain and France regarding Mussolini's intervention in Spain has unquestionably encouraged the Duce to do his worst in the belief that no dangerous countermoves are likely to be made by London and Paris. He may be wrong in this belief. But in the meantime the turmoil from Gibraltar to Suez steadily increases.

Delayed Flood Control.

Good fortune has again saved residents of the Potomac and other nearby river valleys from serious flood losses. Another few days of rain in these areas and ruinous waters would once more have been surging through homes, factories and stores in many cities. As matters stand, there has been considerable damage at Cumberland and other points in the Potomac Valley.

A complete survey of the Potomac area by Army engineers has been authorized, but it awaits the appropriation of funds. In the meantime, communities along the river have been left to their own resources. Some levees and protective walls have been built by municipalities. Obviously, they do not afford a solution of the larger flood problem. The frequency with which flood waters have been rolling down the Potomac in recent years indicates the urgency of a more comprehensive program.

Some steps have been taken to prevent repetition of flood disasters in Pittsburgh. Two dams in that area are under construction and nine more have been authorized. But the strengthening of flood walls and levees along the Ohio River is being delayed by the rigid restrictions applicable to the expenditure of WPA funds made available for that purpose.

A total of $8,000,000 in relief funds has been earmarked for flood-control work along the Ohio. But, despite this week's threat of new floods, that work is not going forward. Apparently some officials believe it is more important to draw workmen from certain areas or to provide a certain employment ratio to money spent than it is to afford protection against the ever-present danger of rising waters.

If the high waters now rushing to the sea could serve to break that log jam, and to hasten the Potomac Valley survey, they would doubtless prove more beneficial than destructive.

Japan says the disturbance in China isn't war. If it's peace, it's a kind that passeth all understanding.

A German scientist is trying to perfect a serum which will cure laziness. If he is successful, the world will have available a cure for about nine-tenths of its troubles.

Public Defenders.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the September, 1937, session of the judicial conference between the Chief Justice of the United States and the senior United States Circuit Court of Appeals judges, Attorney General Cummings brought to its attention "the subject of proper representation for indigent defendants in criminal cases." The following resolution was adopted by the conference:

We approve in principle the appointment of a public defender where the amount of criminal business of a district court justifies the appointment. In other districts the district judge before whom a criminal case is pending should appoint counsel for indigent defendants unless such assistance is declined by the defendant. In exceptional cases involving a great amount of time and effort on the part of counsel so assigned, suitable provision should be made for compensation for such service, to be fixed by the court and to be a charge against the United States.

This forward-looking and highly important resolution by that distinguished conference is perhaps the most significant step which has thus far been taken to extend the public defender system generally for accused poor persons.

This action, by that conference, will not only tend to minimize much of the bar opposition to this fundamentally sound and humane proposal for justice to the poor in the criminal courts, but it probably will facilitate favorable action by Congress on the pending bills, introduced by Senator Arthur Capper and Representative Byron N. Scott, to provide public defenders in the Federal district courts.

The National Lawyers Guild has already gone on record as favoring the extension of the official public defender system and many bar and civic groups are now giving sympathetic study to the proposal.

The due administration of criminal justice—as well as the proper attitude of the public toward the law and the courts—require that there should not be one kind of justice for the rich and one for the poor. The present evil of the rich defendant getting too much defense and the poor defendant not getting enough must be abolished, if our concept of a fair trial to all accused persons is to be realized.

MAYER C. GOLDMAN,
Chairman of Committee on Public Defenders of New York State Bar Association and National Lawyers Guild.

Two Comments on Algic Mutiny

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I agree thoroughly with the editorials of The Post on the question of the mutiny on board the S. S. Algic, and I disagree thoroughly with Frank Harrison, who upholds such mutiny by implication.

As a naval officer and as a merchant marine officer I have had very good opportunities to observe the equities of this situation now confronting the merchant marine, and in addition I have traveled as a passenger on American ships and English ships.

In the Navy the enlisted men are, in a short period of time, and regardless of their previous condition, transformed into clean, neat self-respecting seamen and artisans. They soon learn the habit of cleanliness. They are well fed and sleep in hammocks, with blankets, but without sheets. They are expected to give instant obedience to commands and to respect their officers.

In the merchant marine, many if not most of the seamen know and care nothing of seamanship, and a fair proportion of them are the scum of the waterfronts of our seaboard cities. If they get a clean place to sleep they soon make it filthy because they don't understand or care about cleanliness any more than they know or care about the operation of a ship.

To the naval officer who goes into the merchant service as I did, the impression is that merchant sailors are coddled. They have to have sheets, they have to have their diet posted on the forecastle door. They don't want to work a minute over eight hours, and have to be forced to work in cases of emergency. Their work is easy, during their eight hours they stand some wheel watches and do a bit of painting, or going in and out of port, get the cargo tackle ready and the mooring lines ready. When one considers that they get board and lodging in addition to wages, they are paid better than their capabilities would enable them to be paid ashore.

I grant that on some passenger ships the crews have had inadequate eating and sleeping quarters, and these conditions should be corrected and are being corrected. However, on board some of the big liners on which the crews invariably make trouble, the men are able to sit out on deck and sun themselves for hours and appear to have nearly as much time to loaf as the passengers. Fire and boat drills show the lack of discipline among these crews and there is hardly a crew afloat that could save passengers and themselves in a crisis. In a storm they would rarely get a boat over the side without disaster.

On small ships there is no discipline except what the officers enforce with guns or other physical means. On the big passenger liners the stewards stand around and grow fat while complaining to sympathetic passengers of their hard lot. The original Jones shipping act is responsible for much of the trouble. By that act it became more serious an offense for a sailor to broach cargo than to attack an officer and if the officer protects himself he is in danger of losing his license.

Either we are going to put the merchant marine under naval discipline and give control of the ships back to the officers instead of the labor unions, or we might as well give up the idea of having a merchant marine and concede the seagoing carrying industry to the British, the Japanese and the Scandinavians.

One mistake we made was to flood our marine with foreigners, who took out American citizenship papers merely for the higher wages in our service. With some of the rats on American ships no American wants to be associated.

OFFICER.
Chevy Chase, Md., Oct. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The old book before me bears the publication date 1844. It is the proceedings of the court-martial of Commander Alexander Slidell Mackenzie, U. S. N., who, on December 1, 1842, had the midshipman, Philip Spencer, and two seamen, hanged to the yardarm of the United States brig Somers.

I make no comment upon that graphic and well-known chapter in the annals of the Navy. I offer no conclusions on whether there was really a mutiny. My only purpose is to repeat what the bluff commander said 95 years ago to the midshipman just before the young officer's body shot skyward.

"I told him," Commander Mackenzie informed the court-martial, "that for those who have friends or money in America there was no punishment for the worst of crimes."

U. Of Tennessee's Stadium.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ed Harris, sports editor for the Knoxville Journal, in writing of the fine new stadium—"largest of its kind in the South"—to be built for the University of Tennessee at Knoxville, says that the work is a joint undertaking of the university and of WPA. It will "cost more than $80,000, but the exact cost cannot be estimated because we plan to take it bit by bit and season by season." He says they hope to make use of it in the football season of 1938. It is planned to seat 60,000 people or about 2,000 more than at Tulane in New Orleans, the present largest stadium in the South.

It seems surprising that a university with such a good revenue-producing football team as the University of Tennessee should not be too proud to sponge on national taxpayers to build its stadium. At the recent very exciting and densely packed game in Durham between Tennessee and Duke resulting in the tie of 0-0, it would seem as if Tennessee's share of the profits of this game alone might have gone a very long way toward payment for the stadium.

Why should taxpayers all over the country, whether or not interested in football or in the Tennessee teams, be forced to pay for this particular favor for the University of Tennessee? Although the amount is only a trifle in the colossal extravagance of the Roosevelt Administration, yet it is an example of how the constant frittering away of money keeps the national budget unbalanced and prompts lack of confidence over the President's reiterated promises to balance the budget. HENRY D. BAKER.

A. F. Of L.-C. I. O. Split.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My feminine intuition (the counterpart of the masculine hunch) tells me that the reason why the present struggle between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. has reached such a grim deadlock is because the two organizations have different objectives in mind.

Can it be possible that the A. F. of L. does not represent the real interests of labor at all, but is a capitalistic organization masquerading under the guise of a labor union? If that is the case, then the deadlock may be easily understood and the combat between the two "factions," in its ultimate analysis, becomes just another front in the great struggle between capital and labor.

If that is the case, it is small wonder the C. I. O. refuses to surrender the essential tenets which make it the C. I. O. If it did so, it would be a traitor to the cause of labor, and I, for one, would deplore any such action. Rather than such a surrender, the present deadlock is a thousand times more healthy for the cause of labor and of the Nation.

Am I right or wrong in my assumption? AMERICAN WOMAN.

Singers' Voices.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a singer and one who reads Mr. Ray C. B. Brown's excellent articles with avidity, I have been most interested in the controversy concerning Sir Milsom Rees' statement that the vocal cords were not made for singing.

Singing, when properly done, can give infinite pleasure, and if we want to do what we can to help this troubled world along its difficult path, there will always be people who will wear out their vocal cords to that end, just as doctors wear out their hearts by going to patients in the middle of the night to relieve their suffering. We must wear out or starve, and I prefer the former!

If everyone kept his vocal cords in perfect condition, never using them for anything but speech, his voice would probably be abominably placed, in any case. When singers age, they at least know how to use what they have left (which should suffice their needs). They usually have strong lungs and are as well off as those who never got more than a screech out of their throats. MARY FRASER.

From The Tar Barrel

Nature has filled the tar barrel with a lavish hand, and it has brought color and comfort to mankind. It is the philosopher's egg, the elixir of life of the modern alchemist.

A remarkable Materia Medica could be compiled, limited entirely to coal-tar products. The rejected nuisance, the despised by-product of the past, is nature's own laboratory, whose magic alembic distills fluids and vapors and scales and crystals for the alleviation of suffering.

From coal-tar and allied substances are derived countless synthetics which have replaced the herbs of our forefathers. Among these remedies are the antiseptics, phenol, cresol, resorcin; the local anesthetics, alypin, novocaine, stovaine; the hypnotics, veronal, adalin, luminal; such antipyretics as pyramidon, acetanilid and that household fetich, aspirin.

Out of the tar barrel, the exhaustless hope-chest of science, have come such diverse medicinals as saccharin, the permissible sugar of the diabetic; atoxyl for sleeping sickness; and salvarsan and neosalvarsan for the conquest of syphilis.

Parasiticides and perfumes, fuels and photographic supplies, the asphalt of the pavement and the varnish on the roof, are all born in the deep womb of coal-tar. Cradled in England, the coal-tar industry reached maturity in Germany.

Coal-tar industrialism has grown too big for ethical control. Worship of the chemical god was one of the economic factors of the World War. Perhaps it is time for the generation that has grown up in the shadow of the machine age to heed the words of Aristotle. "Industrial work," said Aristotle, "tends to lower the standard of thought." In our era it has lowered the entire standard of human behavior. Every discovery of science is now tested in the counting house of commerce. It is only poetic justice that in the World War, coal-tar, which gave man the healing antiseptics, chloramine-T and dichloramine-T, to soothe his wounds, also gave him trinitrotoluene—the dreaded explosive T.N.T.—and poison gas.

Over the fields where man has shed the blood of man, forever sounds the challenge: "After two thousand years of mass, have we got as far as poison-gas?"

(Dr. Victor Robinson in the Scientific Monthly.)

On A Cold Trail.

Sir Edward Poulton, following a suitable period of experiment, came before the learned members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science to discourse on dice-throwing, otherwise and far better known as crap-shooting. Sir Edward announces that the larger numbers come up most often because the dots made by scooping out the face of the die lightens it, and he adds that there is just enough weight taken out of six to make it come to the top more often than any other.

Sir Edward, we greatly fear, will have his trouble for his pains and will discover that he is off on a cold trail as far as American crap-shooters are concerned. These gentlemen, and ladies, have no yen for science and no belief in it as far as the sport of galloping dominoes is concerned. As a matter of fact, a shooter is either "hot" or he isn't. If he is "hot" he can get whatever he wants, and if he isn't, nothing, including science, makes any difference. If science entered into the reckoning of the human race in such matters there would be no crap games, regardless of how badly baby might need shoes, and thus would the American language lose some of the most fervent and picturesque uses to which it is ever put as matters go.

Incidentally, we have been interested to be unable to discover, or recall any pet names for three, six, seven and eleven in the more or less noble vocabulary of the more or less noble sport of shooting craps. Two is "Snake-eyes," and four is "Little Joe." Five is either "Fever" or "Phoebe," and an eight is an "Eighter from Decatur." A nine is "Nina from Palestina," at least in some circles where the boys kneel and not precisely in devotion. A ten is "Big Dick from Dixie," and a twelve is "Boxcars," but three is just plain "Craps." Seven and eleven seem to speak for themselves, which they do from time to time, and no one title seems to have developed for a six. If Sir Edward is no busier than he would seem to be, he might go ahead and let science take a whirl at how these names developed.

No Paltry Cash.

Any householder who has attempted to negotiate the purchase of a rib roast or mess of pork chops for a large family will understand the psychology of the thieves who broke into a Southwest Side butcher shop a few nights ago.

Passing up the cash register, they concentrated on the refrigerator, stripping it of some $400 worth of meats. No pikers, these burglars, to fool with paltry cash!

They played the game of crime for higher steaks.

Democratic Loathing.

ALL BELIEVERS in democracy naturally loathe Mussolini, Hitler and all that they represent, but there should be a sort of Jim Crow rule to segregate Communists who would attempt to join us in this pleasure.

They have special reasons for their hatred, quite different from those of people who believe in freedom. After all, the Communists were responsible for these horrors; and it isn't the atrocities which they deplore, but the fact that they aren't in charge of the terror. They are sore because one set of tough guys in Italy and another set in Germany finally decided that they would rather die than submit to any more kicking around and went into the streets to fight the Bolos according to their own rough-and-tumble rules. The record book shows that in each case the Communists took an awful shellacking.

But they had gone around asking for it: murdering inoffensive patriots, wrecking, mobbing, bombing, terrorizing and showing their muscle until a long-suffering Popeye reached inside his guimpe for his can of spinach, cranked up the Sunday punch and let them have it square on the button.

Mussolini's hoodlums crowded them with castor oil until it ran out their ears, sometimes in cocktail form, mixed with kerosene, and, whether they took it neat or half-and-half, the results usually were fatal in a very dreadful and humiliating way. This method of execution or assassination, though unique and ribald, was no more final nor painful, however, than some of the standard practices by which the Communists had wiped out nobody knows how many hundred thousand political heretics in Russia and which they were using in their post-war missionary work among the Italians and the downhearted Heinies.

THEY WERE very cocky and took no back talk from the natives when they were out in front, and it was only when the home crowd took the play away and began to run them up alleys that they appreciated the horrors of the concentration camps and appealed to the sucker liberals of the world to witness what dirt was being done. But their own prisons weren't country clubs, and if Fascists and Nazis carried things to bloody extremes, as nobody doubts they did and do, they have been no more savage than the Communists had been nor would be in this country tomorrow if they held the dice.

They cut their initials in both countries, however, for when it came time to fight, Fascists and Nazis adopted their methods and ethics and thus degraded themselves to the level which they had thought to escape. They abolished freedom of the press and thought and speech, and became bold, bland, cantankerous liars and double-crossers, to whom no perfidy was too rotten for the achievement of any purpose, and no pledge or treaty was worth the ink on the paper. They withdrew from civilization to start something which they thought was news but which was merely a reversion to vices that intelligent races hoped they had outgrown until the Communists revived them.

• • • •

FASCISTS and Nazis, taught by their experience with the Communists, obtain American citizenship with their fingers crossed and with hatred of American principles in their hearts, and invoke their rights as such to strut their loyalty to murderous dictators in the guise of good-will groups.

Likewise our Communists, imported and domestic, demand the protection of the hated and abused police and of a government whose destruction is their purpose when they go out to demonstrate against that government.

Both are a political burden to any candidate whom they afflict with their indorsement, and the C. I. O.'s worst handicap is its unscrupulous, if unwelcome, element of Communists who see in a unified command of three million workmen, properly exploited, an army of riot and oppression.

Cause and effect: equally brutal and ruthless, equally intolerant, cynical and hostile to American belief, they call on democracy to witness and punish the atrocities which they have inflicted on one another. The point to remember amid their clamor is that they are six of one and a half-dozen of the other and that because they are practically alike one healthy democratic loathing will cover both.

The national deficit this year will be $695,000,000, or about $277,000,000 more than estimated, which is pretty good for the movement.

Gen. Han's Dilemma

Governor Of Rich Shantung Province Torn Between Rich Offers Of Japanese Invaders And Loyalty To Nanking Government.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondent of The Post.

SHANGHAI.

WITH THE JAPANESE juggernaut steadily rolling southward toward the Yangtze River, Gen. Han Fu-chu, governor of the immensely rich province of Shantung and one of China's most famous warlords, is reported today to be "sitting on the fence." Late last month, before the Japanese forces crossed the border of Shantung, the Japanese army asked Gen. Han to renounce his allegiance to Nanking and offered him a high position in the projected autonomous federation of the five northern provinces.

Gen. Han's record since he assumed the governorship of the province seven years ago has not been such as to justify excessive confidence in his patriotism. The presence of the Government's troops in Shantung, as well as the strong tide of anti-Nipponism sweeping the country, have, however, made it difficult for him to accept the generous Japanese offer. Caught between the Japanese army and the popular sentiment Gen. Han now has to decide whether he prefers to be a dispossessed patriot or a prosperous traitor.

Much depends on Gen. Han's decision. Shantung, coveted by Japan for the past 25 years, blocks the Japanese advance toward Nanking. With Shantung in its hands the Nipponese army will easily complete its military compaign in Shansi Province, and will also be enabled, whenever the imperial designs require it, to strike a lightning blow at the neighboring provinces of Kiangsu, Anhwei and Honan.

With Shantung under their control, the Nipponese military "brain twisters" will have completed their preliminary preparations for the creation of the long-heralded "autonomous" area in North China, called to existence by the same "popular demand" and the "Will of Gods," which played such an important part in the establishment of Manchukuo.

Japanese Minister Complains Of Stand.

BY HIS PRESENT stand, it must be admitted, Gen. Han fully justifies the Japanese War Minister's complaint that he is "maintaining an ambiguous attitude."

Gen. Han has always been friendly toward Japan, probably realizing that the latter would not hesitate to employ force should the vast Japanese interests in the province be endangered.

The canny warlord could not possibly forget that Japanese troops held Shantung in their hands twice in recent history, 1915-22 and 1928, and were both times compelled to release their grip on the province on' by the vigorous pressure exerted by other great powers, notably the United States.

Han's relations with the Nanking government on the other hand, have never been marked by excessive warmth. Watching the steady extension of Nanking's influence over the bailwicks of other warlords, Gen. Han has bitterly and successfully fought for the absolute independence of his domain. He allowed the collection of customs and salt gabelle duties in Shantung, but released these funds on the tacit understanding that he would receive an approximately equal amount from Nanking as a "military subsidy."

Yet, credit must be given to Gen. Han for consistently refusing to join other warlords in anti-Nanking plots. He apparently did not forget that he was given the governorship in reward for aiding Nanking to crush a rebellion headed by his own former superior, Marshal Feng Yu-hsiang.

Han Has Maintained Impeccable Attitude.

THROUGHOUT these crises, Gen. Han had maintained an impeccably correct attitude toward both Nanking and Japan.

In 1935, Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, the then head of the Japanese Kwantung army's secret service and Asia's leading plotter, applied himself to the task of severing the five northern provinces from China without firing a single shot.

His many maneuvers were successful until he tackled Gen. Han. The latter apparently had an understanding with Nanking, and was, moreover, unwilling to link his destinies with those of a few ignorant and avaricious warlords, brought by the Japanese into the rich Peiping-Tientsin area from the barren mountains of Chahar.

There were interminable negotiations and when, finally, Gen. Doihara decided that the stage was all set for the final act of the northern drama and called all the actors to Peiping, Gen. Han suddenly caught a severe diplomatic cold which forced him to remain in a Tsinan hospital for the duration of Gen. Doihara's stay in North China.

The Japanese had to remain contented with the creation of a semi-autonomous administration in the provinces of Hopei and Chahar. The failure of the Japanese play was ascribed to the non-appearance of two leading actors—Gen. Han and Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, another famous warlord, governing the provinces of Suiyuan and Shansi, now partly in Japanese hands.

Soon following the outbreak of the North China incident, on July 7 last, Doihara, now a lieutenant general and a divisional commander, reappeared on the North China scene in a new effort to carry out his plans of 1934-35.

This much is known to me from unimpeachable sources — Mr. M. Arino, Japanese consul general in Tsinan and a close friend of Gen. Han—visited Tokyo soon after the outbreak of the North China incident, when by all considerations he should have stayed at his post. Immediately after his return to Tsinan Mr. Arino made an eight-hour courtesy call on Gen. Han.

I suggested at the time that there might have been a political lining to Mr. Arino's truly Japanese politeness. The present events indicate that the suspicion was well founded. It now seems probable that Mr. Arino informed Gen. Han of Tokyo's decision to wage war on Nanking and transmitted to Gen. Han the Japanese government's concrete proposals for the inclusion of Shantung within an autonomous state in North China.

Japanese Relations Continue To Be Cordial.

WHATEVER the nature of the interview, the relations between the Shantung authorities and the Japanese fighting services continued to remain amiable after the outbreak of the current hostilities. Gen. Han held the popular sentiment in check with an iron hand, while the Japanese authorities made every effort to avoid an incident. The single untoward event—an attack on a Japanese bluejacket—was quickly hushed up.

His own troops Gen. Han has withdrawn to the vicinity of Weihsien, about midway between Tsinan and Tsingtao and far away from the scene of Sino-Japanese hostilities. While a brigade of Gen. Han's forces is reported to be fighting the Japanese invaders on the border, this is not yet regarded by either Tokyo or Nanking as a sign of Gen. Han's decision to oppose Japan.

China's foreign friends here appeared to be anxious to be misled by no Japanese rumors, but the fact that Gen. Han's troops remained within a safe distance of the Japanese, instead of trying to stem the foe's advance, made them dubious.

Yet one cannot be too harsh on this coolie who rose to the governorship of one of China's most prosperous provinces. He can either throw in his lot with Nanking and be deprived of his possessions, which has ruled ruthlessly but justly, or link his destiny with Nippon and live in constant fear of assassination or Japanese displeasure.

The dilemma is admittedly the most difficult this warlord, nicknamed "King Solomon of Shantung," for his rustic wisdom, has faced in a decade of political activity.

Friend And Ally

By Barnet Nover.

A Visitor From The Northland.

THE EXTREMELY cordial welcome which Secretary Hull extended to Dr. Halvdan Koht, foreign minister of Norway, during the latter's visit to Washington this week, was by way of being a three-fold tribute.

It was a mark of friendship for the official representative of a sister democracy that has contributed so many stalwart sons to the United States. It was, in addition, an expression of high regard for one of Europe's ablest statesmen who is also an historian and a biographer of distinction. But not least of all, in greeting Dr. Koht, Mr. Hull was welcoming a man of like-minded views who with his fellow statesmen of the Oslo group is seeking to do from the vantage point of the Old World what Mr. Hull has sought to accomplish from the vantage point of the New.

WITH A pertinacity and single-mindedness that have won universal admiration, Secretary Hull has for some years been trying to break the log-jam of international trade both because of the obvious economic advantages such a development would have to all the nations of the world and because it could effectively contribute to an appeasement of existing international tensions.

In principle practically all governments, including those actually pursuing the precisely opposite course, have subscribed to Mr. Hull's views regarding the advisability of removing or reducing existing trade barriers. But only a minority among them have shown any real readiness to grasp the economic olive branch held out to them from Washington.

• • • •

OF THE 16 nations with whom we have already concluded reciprocal trade agreements ten are with nations in this hemisphere, i. e., Cuba, Haiti, Brazil, Canada, Honduras, Colombia, Guatemala, Nicaragua, El Salvador and Costa Rica. And of the remaining six, four are with nations that are members of the Oslo group, namely — Belgium, the Netherlands, Sweden and Finland. Once a reciprocal trade agreement is made with Norway, as can now be anticipated, only one Oslo power, Denmark, would remain outside the circle.

As a matter of fact the Oslo power preached the Hull doctrine even before Hull. Five years ago—two years before the New Deal and at a time when the United States was still wedded to Smoot-Hawleyism — the three Scandinavian kingdoms, Finland, Belgium and the Netherlands, sought to stem the tide of high protectionism sweeping the world.

• • • •

THEY DID not succeed. The times were against them. And in particular the refusal of Great Britain to waive its most-favored-nation rights, doomed the original Oslo agreement to failure.

Early this year the six nations tried again. The tide of autarchy was still running strong and in many places continues to do so. In Germany Dr. Schacht's efforts to put a brake on the so-called four-year plan favored by the Nazi extremists have met with failure. Dr. Schacht has now admitted his defeat by resigning as minister of economics and may, before long, resign as head of the Reichsbank as well. In Italy self-containment remains the goal of the Fascist regime. Russia's economy is a closed one. And Great Britain appeared to be firmly wedded to the Ottawa system. Nonetheless, the world situation so far as the outlook for freer trade was concerned was not without its encouraging aspects.

• • • •

IN FRANCE the Popular Front regime which came into power in June, 1936 was favorably inclined to the idea of freer trade. In Central Europe, despite vast political and economic obstacles, the Little Entente states together with Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria were revealing themselves as not unreceptive to an increasing measure of economic co-operation between them. But above all the example set by the United States was particularly encouraging. The same nation which, in 1930, had given such enormous impetus to protectionism and set a fashion in tariff boosting widely imitated was now making an about-face. This, to the statesmen of the democratic lands of northern Europe was particularly encouraging.

• • • •

EARLY THIS year, at the instance of the Netherlands government, the Oslo group met again and agreed to a program of freer trade between them. The convention has been in force since July 1.

As it happens, the amount of trade between the signatories of this pact is not great. But the moral effect of their action may prove to be not inconsiderable. Alone, each of these six nations is small and weak. None of them plays or wants to play a great political role in European or world affairs.

The frenzied search for power and prestige which characterizes the policies of certain of their neighbors finds no echo among them. No adjective better characterizes them than civilized. And being civilized they believe in the policy of live and let live, of give and take. Not without reason they find in Mr. Hull a friend and supporter. And he finds in them a welcome ally.

The lights of peace and reason may be burning low in many parts of the world. In Dr. Koht's land and in the neighboring lands linked with his in the Oslo group they continue to burn brightly.

Historical Fiction

By William Lyon Phelps

"Swords In The Dawn."

Here is a novel I can unreservedly recommend to boys and girls, men and women, educated and uneducated. It is seldom I have seen history and fiction so agreeably mingled. The author is Prof. John O. Beaty and the publishers are Longmans, Green & Co., New York.

The numerous illustrations in the book add immensely to its value; they are by Henry C. Pitz.

• • • •

We know Hengist and Horsa came over from the mainland near Denmark and settled in southeastern England, where Hengist became king of that territory. This is a matter of importance to us today, because we should I suppose be rather different from what we are, if Hengist and Horsa had never made a successful invasion. They got over about the middle of the fifth century, about 450 A. D.

The map on the inside covers of this book is very helpful. And one may supplement that by looking at both sides of the North Sea on any modern map.

• • • •

All American schoolboys know a little, usually a very little, about the Angles, Saxons and Jutes and their entrance into England; the knowledge of most persons on this theme is extremely vague. Now I have never read any book which makes the matter so clear as I find it in this story; and the pill of knowledge is well sweetened with fighting, romance and love. It is a rattling good yarn and full of valuable information. The author has built his story on a scholarly foundation; so that the boats and the armor and the customs in war and peace in this exciting romance are given in a trustworthy manner. I am grateful to Prof. Beaty.

We Croon For The Bazooka

Bing Crosby, whose velvet tonsils bring ecstasy to his huge public weekly on the cheese hour, is the recipient of an honorary degree of doctor of philosophy. Gonzaga University—situated at Spokane, Wash., in case this great educational center is unknown to you—decided to confer this distinction on the most eminent of the crooners.

That lighthouse of learning failed, however, to recognize the achievements of Bob Burns, the bazooka virtuoso who appears weekly with Bing on the cheese hour. Are we to understand that Gonzaga University considers crooning a branch of the higher learning, but regards bazooka playing as merely a diversion for nitwits? Is Gonzaga going to down its academic nose at the lowly bazooka?

This is a democratic country. In the name of Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson we protest against the introduction of intellectual snobbery at Gonzaga.

(Richmond Times-Dispatch.)

Tom McCarthy

Finds "Doorbell Night" Is Out.

HONEST, it's alarming. They've never heard of a "tick-tack." They don't celebrate "cabbage stump night." And they can't find any doorbells to ring!

Maybe it's the march of civilization, but gosh it has me worried. Even if it is all for the best.

TOM McCARTHY.

I went up to the Public School on Seventeenth street northwest to find out what the sixth graders were going to do about Halloween. And when I learned that the kids at the Cook School had never heard of a "tick-tack"—well, it almost spoiled my day.

Maybe this new order of peace and sanity is an improvement. But I'm not sure. I'll never forget the expression on Willie Walters' face the night he ran into the clothesline, with "Old Man" Boggs after him. Nor will I forget the way Johnny Whiton looked when Mr. Trimble's chauffeur caught him, just as he was wiring the door knob to the porch pillar. And with wire he'd swiped from the Trimble garage.

I guess all that's in the past, though, if they don't celebrate "cabbage stump night" and "doorbell night," any more as a prelude to Halloween. Of course, I guess we should have seen it coming.

I know we never matched my dad's trick of reassembling a farmer's wagon on the church roof. Nor did our gang go in for such brash carryings-on as John Heiney reports took place in Indiana.

Mr. Heiney tells me that they not only used cabbage stumps and tomatoes as ammunition back in Indiana, but that a night or so before the hallowed eve they dedicated the evening to throwing corn cobs at the front doors.

"'Corn-Throwing Night' is what we called it," Mr. Heiney told me proudly.

• • • •

BUT I GUESS this is all "hearsay" to the youngsters out at Cook Public School. If they can't find a doorbell to ring, I don't see how they could be expected to find anything like a cabbage stump.

"We ring doorbells on Halloween" 11-year-old Martin Becker told me, "but we have a hard time finding them." Martin ran his hand through his tousled red hair, in a gesture of disgust.

"It's simply awful," said Patsy Richards who boasts the dignity of a great lady, and an almost equal amount of freckles. "It's really terrible," she said, "because even on the houses, let alone the apartment buildings, you can't find doorbells to ring.

"You know," she said, 'all these modern houses have knockers on them." All the sixth grade looked a little downcast at this observation, and even Miss Williams, the teacher, tried not to smile.

"Well, I'll tell you what I do," Allan Marans volunteered. Allan is only 11, but everyone weighed his words. "I push the knocker up against the door—so it's standing up instead of hanging down. And then I tie a string to it.

"If you do it right you can get off the porch, pull the knocker down with a bang, and knock a couple of times before you run." Everyone looked reassured after Allan had delivered himself of his system.

"And you can always put leaves on the porches," Alfred Brandler reminded them.

"Or go downtown and watch the parade," chubby Jimmy Hodges said. Just 10 years old, he said that he figured he'd be able to stay up "at least until 9 o'clock, because of Halloween."

• • • •

BUT IT DIDN'T sound like the old-fashioned Halloween at all. And after the kids got to talking about what they were going to do I realized that they weren't worried about it either.

"We're going to have a party," Patsy Richards said, "and we can play games."

"Games like eating crackers and then trying to whistle," Martin Becker said, "but after that I'm going to see if I can't ring a doorbell." Martin was a die-hard.

"Maybe we can bob for apples," one of the little girls suggested. But Patsy turned down that idea.

"That's so old-fashioned," said the 10-year-old Miss Richards, "but we are going to have a 'talent show.' That'll be fun.

"You know," she continued, "Willoughby Newton is producing it. And he's awfully good at that. And he says that he's going to be a producer. And I think he will be." Patsy finished all out of breath.

Willoughby Newton it developed is also in the sixth grade, and already he's been accepted by his classmates as a rising young producer. He tells the kids just what parts they should play. He can spot a good singer before he or she even leaves the fifth grade. And when it come to uncovering comedians he has no peer.

• • • •

SO THEY'RE going to have a party, and a talent show in the sixth grade out at Cook School, on Seventeenth street. They'll be able to stay out an hour or two longer Halloween night. And they look forward to having a swell time even if they can't find doorbells.

But somehow, I figure this more sensible younger generation is missing something with the demise of the old-time Halloween. Unless—and this has just occurred to me—those kids were holding out!

Asking them about their Halloween plans! I'll bet they figured it was none of my darn business!

Nearly All Seats Sold for School Lunch Benefit

Alice Deal Junior High Pupils Lead in Drive to Aid Hungry.

It looks like a sell-out for the first benefit magic show at the Belasco Theater Monday afternoon. About 1200 seats of the 1400 available have been sold for the show, sponsored by the Washington chapter of the American Society of Magicians to aid the free school lunch drive.

Of the 35 schools selling tickets, the most successful was Alice Deal Junior High School, where 212 sales were reported. Western Union, which is co-operating in the drive, announced that it was receiving a flood of orders but had not yet calculated the total.

The shows will continue twice daily throughout next week. Tickets cost 50 cents. The committee is appealing particularly to District school children who are in a position to help their needy fellows in this way. Each 50-cent ticket assures some child seven hot lunches. Tickets sold so far will buy food for more than 8,000 lunches.

If sales for the rest of the shows are as satisfactory as those for the first matinee, the program may be held over a second week, it was indicated yesterday by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Citizens' Emergency Committee for Feeding Hungry School Children. The committee hopes to accumulate a fund of $67,000, which will guarantee lunches for 5,100 children during the current school year.

M. L. Langford, vice president of the Sanitary Grocery Co., arrived at the committee's Mayflower Hotel headquarters yesterday, weighed down with $497.83 in pennies, nickles and dimes. The sum was collected in the company's stores in the course of the last ten days. The contributions were solicited from customers as part of the committee's "silent guest" campaign.

A smaller but equally welcome sum was received about the same time. It was a check for $4, accompanied by the following letter:

"In memory of Susan Kryler Wright, who passed away yesterday, we are sending this contribution to the school fund lunch instead of sending flowers to the funeral. She loved children and we think she would approve."

Cable Club Will Mark Halloween With Dance

The Telephone Company Cable Club will celebrate Halloween tonight at the Jewish Community Center with a cotton blossom minstrel and dance.

Ottis Ray will direct the production and the minstrel show will be followed by a masquerade dance featuring the popular music of Dick Davis and his orchestra. A limited supply of tickets is obtainable at the Jewish Community Center.

Symphony Board Takes Jelleff as New Member

The Board of Directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association yesterday afternoon greeted Frank R. Jelleff, president of Jelleff's, Inc., as a new member. The meeting was held at the office of Walter Bruce Howe, secretary of the board, with Corcoran Thom presiding.

Plans for the seventh season were discussed. The first concert will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Constitution Hall with Dr. Hans Kindler conducting. The Wagnerian Festival Singers will be soloists.

Fliers to Compete In Air Ball Game At College Park

The first game of airball in local flying history will be played at the College Park Airport, College Park, Md., at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Four squares surrounding a central square will be marked off on the airport. Each player will be given four tennis balls and will drop one on each passage over the field, flying not lower than 300 feet.

Scoring will depend upon the areas in which the balls come to rest. Prizes will be awarded to the contestants placing first and second in the unusual game.

The Washington Air Derby Association, sponsor of the contest, last night held a Halloween party in its clubhouse at the College Park Airport.

1938 Auto License Blanks Are Ready

Applications for 1938 automobile tags will be mailed to more than 200,000 District motorists starting next Wednesday, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday.

Van Duzer cautioned motorists that if they have moved in the last year without notifying the Traffic Department they will not receive their applications. The postmaster has been requested not to forward any of the mail, the director stated.

Tags will be mailed starting November 15. Over-the-counter sales will begin November 29.

Fish Would Bench Hoover for G.O.P.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Oct. 29 (AP).—Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, said today he hoped both Herbert Hoover and Alf M. Landon would "from now on sit on the sidelines and let someone else carry the ball."

"I have the highest regard for both Hoover and Landon," Fish said, "but if they continue to assume to be titular heads of the party, I say 'plague on both your houses.'"

New Aircraft Carrier Starts Cruise Jan. 8

The new aircraft carrier Yorktown, commissioned last month at Newport News, Va., will make her shakedown cruise from January 8 to March 7, it was learned at the Navy Department yesterday.

New reduction gears, meeting Navy specifications, will be installed at the Norfolk Navy Yard beginning May 15, to replace faulty machinery now in use.

Churches of Christ Ask Neutrality Invocation

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 29 (AP).—The international convention of the Churches of Christ (Disciples) called upon President Roosevelt and Congress late today to invoke and enforce the neutrality law in the Sino-Japanese war.

The convention elected Dr. F. D. Kershner, of Indianapolis, president, to succeed the Rev. A. W. Fortune, of Lexington, Ky. Dr. Kershner is dean of the college of religion at Butler University.

Radicals Cheer Herriot Tirade Against Fascism

Leader Calls Mediterranean 'Infernal Lake of Piracy,' Hails French Stand.

By the Associated Press.

Lille, France, Oct. 29.—Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, today brought the entire Radical-Socialist Congress to its feet with roaring approval after a dramatic address in which he declared France never would turn to fascism.

France's veteran statesman, hands trembling with emotion and eyes wet, cried:

"We are told that Europe will be Fascist, but I believe I know one country which will never be Fascist."

A major part of his speech was devoted to defining France's position in a world which he said had returned to barbarism.

"The Mediterranean cradle of civilization," he asserted, "has become a sort of infernal lake, where the piracy that Rome fought during the days of Pompey (in the first century B. C.) has been reborn.

"We hoped that we could substitute a frank, open diplomacy for a diplomacy of lies and ruses, but we are far from that."

Delegates cried, "Down with Fascism!"

Neither Herriot nor Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, who spoke before him, referred to Italy or Il Duce by name.

Herriot insisted France must maintain her friendship with the United States "even at the price of sacrifice." He warned his listeners France's economy must be solid because "France's gold is as precious in her defense as the blood of her children."

British Soldiers Killed as Bombing of Shanghai Is Resumed

Soochow Creek, Where British Blocked Japanese Forces

At this point between the north boundary of the International Settlement and Chapei, British forces yesterday held up Japanese launches. A Japanese shell had just exploded in Chapei at time this photo was made. Along this creek, the Chinese "Lost Battalion" barricaded itself in a warehouse to fight to the last man. Three British soldiers were killed in an aerial bombardment.

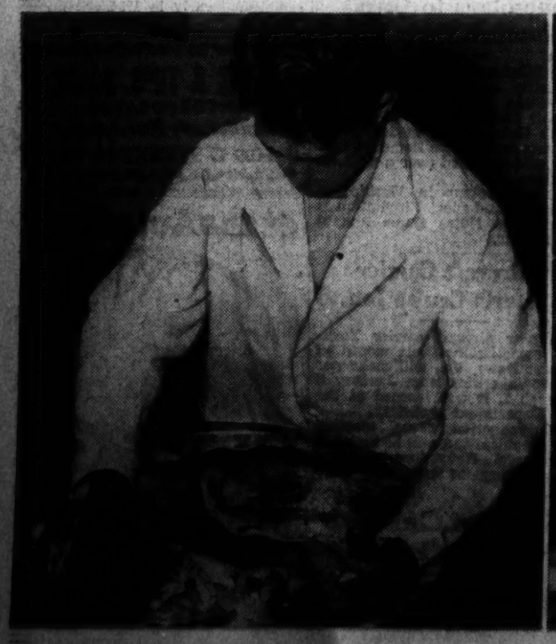
New Curing Method at University of Maryland Experimental Station Ages Hams in Six Weeks



1. SPEEDING UP NATURE. In co-operation with the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Mr F. D. Carroll, of the University of Maryland, shows how the ham is rubbed in a mixture of salt, brown sugar and saltpeter before it is smoked. Three days are allowed for the curing of each pound of ham.

2. A SPECIALLY constructed incubator maintains temperature from 107 to 125 degrees F. The hams are set in the incubator and the thermostat, controlling the heat, is set at the required temperature. Using this process it is no longer necessary to age hams a year or more to obtain that . . .

Mr. Brown Goes Revolutionary In New Comedy

'Fit for a King' Casts Star as a Reporter at RKO-Keith's.

"FIT FOR A KING." RKO-Radio picturization of a screen play by Richard Flournoy, starring Joe E. Brown, with Helen Mack, Paul Kelly, Harry Davenport, Hallwell Hobbes, John Qualen, Donald Briggs, Frank Reicher, Russell Hicks and Charles Trowbridge. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

In "Fit For a King" one may see that "Prisoner of Zenda" influence reacting on Joe E. Brown. Joe goes the Ruritanian classic one better by winning his princess. Sword play is minus, it's true, but Joe's princess-saving, cross-country ride, via motorcycle and haywagon, with interpolated acrobatic and Roman chariot effects, is more startling and dangerous than any dueling.

Also, Joe makes his screen debut as a newspaper man with the nickname of "Scoops," sardonically given, because all he seems to be good for around the city room is to run out and get sandwiches for the managing editor. In irritation, the M. E. finally sends Joe out to trail a visiting princess. Joe trails her so thoroughly that he follows her on the liner on which she is sailing for Europe.

Comes the Revolution.

Once in Europe, comes the revolution. Worse than that, Joe is scooped constantly by his rival, Paul Kelly, a highly unscrupulous lad, who thinks nothing of tearing out a telephone after he has used it. But Joe "Scoops" keeps on trying to get the big news, alternately disguising himself as an aged invalid and a chambermaid as well as a newspaperman. All winds up in a blaze of glory with "Scoops" frustrating the revolutionary plotters and grabbing both the news scoop of the year and the princess who has decided she doesn't want to be a princess, but Mrs. "Scoops."

There is more speed than sense to this diverting celluloid adventure, but then, it is just aimed to be a vehicle for the Brown cavortings. As such, it fills the bill. It would be a good idea, though, if Joe would give up the practice of being the romantic interest in his pictures. He has plenty of scope in just being comic.

A Handsome Princess.

Helen Mack makes a properly pretty princess and Paul Kelly is smooth and handsome as the newspaper meanie who continually outsmarts poor Joe. A newcomer, Donald Biggs, makes the comparatively small part of Prince Michael stand out smartly.

The "March of Time," an item never to be missed, has for its subjects the United States Secret Service, unrest in France's Algerian colony and the surprising and highly creditable industrial adventure conducted by the citizens of Manchester, N. H., in rehabilitating the great Amoskeag plant and placing it on a paying basis. A well balanced newsreel rounds out the factual part of the program.

Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck shine in "Clock Cleaners," another Walt Disney nifty.

Metropolitan

Having had a much-applauded run at the Earle, "The Awful Truth" moves to the Metropolitan to panic yet more addicts of the gay and giddy. Cut on the same pattern which brought added fame to Powell and Loy as a pair of married nit-wits of the best social veneer, this farce rivals their "Thin Man" series in its happy situations and laughter-fraught lines. Whether it is better depends upon your preference for first team honors. Irene Dunne and Cary Grant have a vociferous chorus of admirers. And they are here now, which is a point in their favor.

Lucy and Jerry and "Mr. Smith," which would be Miss Dunne, Mr. Grant and Asta, live in felicitous upheaval. Following no particular pattern, their lives blended in wine and song and dancing and wisecracking to form a satisfactory design. But that was before Jerry went to Florida and brought Lucy California oranges in a goodwill basket, and before Lucy skedaddled around the country with her handsome Continental voice coach, whose decrepit ear was always breaking down.

With the interlocutory decree, custody of Mr. Smith goes to Lucy. And the pooch eventually brings them together sufficiently to break Lucy's engagement to a ballad-howling Oklahoman. Aristocratic Aunt Patsy tosses in some fast 'uns and the worn-thin cliches of the wild man from Oklahoma and Jerry's answers, in like vein, are hilarious. There is also a motorcycle ride which laughingly preludes the final reconciliation, just before the decree becomes final.

Miss Dunne is swell, to coin an adjective. She sings light opera, dances a la Raye and swings dialogue which would have been too absurd in the worng person's handling. Mr. Grant has to be a neat trouper to carry gags like the derby episode. They are a nice couple. "Super-smooth" is an appropriate term.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Shirley Temple Ideally Cast in 'Heidi' at Capitol; Another Comedy Romps Across Screen at the Earle

Able Cast Supports Star in Classic Fiction; Stage Bill a Hit.

"HEIDI." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the story by Johanna Spyri, adapted to the screen by Walter Ferris and Julien Josephson, with song by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell, starring Shirley Temple, with Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Helen Westley, Pauline Moore, Thomas Beck, Mary Nash, Sidney Blackmer, Mady Christians, Ric Ramsaya, Marcia Mae Jones and Egon Brecher. Directed by Allan Dwan. Previewed Tuesday afternoon, October 26. At Loew's Capitol.

"Heidi" is one of the happiest selections of vehicles that have been made for Shirley Temple since she burst upon the screen as the cinema's most precocious and most gifted child star.

BELL.

The juvenile classic by Johanna Spyri has been adapted to the uses of the camera by Twentieth Century-Fox with rather more of an eye to affording the most perfect outlet for its diminutive title player's extraordinary talents than to the formulation of a flawless screen drama. Produced with a keen sense of artistic pictorial effect, the picture launches itself with scenes of simple Alpine life that present no great variety either of action or dialogue but, instead, concentrate on Miss Temple's youthful and irresistible fascinations. Once she is kidnaped from her crotchety, 82-year-old grandfather by a selfish and vindictive aunt, however, there springs into being a story of many contrasts, much humor and an insistent heart appeal that compound an engrossing and mildly melodramatic narrative.

The play hinges, of course, upon the conflict between contrasting social forces to dominate the life of a youngster nobody near or dear to her seems to want—until she has melted the frozen heart of the elderly recluse who has disowned her father. She is bartered by the guardian aunt to a rich family in Frankfort for a sum sufficient to gratify that steely betrayer's immediate avarice. In the city she becomes the companion of a little crippled girl, the daughter of great wealth, who is under the guardianship of a housekeeper no less acquisitive than Heidi's aunt in the matter of her own personal ambitions. From the discreetly exciting manner of her escape from her tormentors and restoration to her grandfather's hermit hut, Heidi emerges as a sort of Alpine composite of Pollyanna and Cinderella.

Shirley Is a Mother's Ideal.

Whatever shortcomings this subject may possess as an example of perfect dramaturgy are subordinate to the major consideration that it provides the fabulous Miss Temple with a story that is wholly within the compass of her years and rich in those elements of childish charm that should characterize all of her vehicles. The role, of course, is completely sympathetic and heavily coated with those saccharine qualities that fit so well into a juvenile character of infinite compassion and an almost-too-good-to-be-true spirit of sacrificial helpfulness. Only in the clutches of her instinctive enemies does Heidi surrender to outbreaks of rebellious temper and, to her credit, be it said that she angers quite as effectively as she expresses the gentler moods of her placid moments.

There is no need to remark that the box-office's ace star interprets her exacting role with more skill and unconscious finesse than any other actress of comparable age possibly could. She is surrounded by adult players who place a severe tax upon her resourcefulness in maintaining an undisputed stellar preeminence. Jean Hersholt is judiciously cast as Adolph Kramer, the recluse of the mountains, feared by all of the villagers as a sort of legendary symbol of infidel evil. Mr. Hersholt has a peculiar aptitude for this type of thing. Mady Christians and Mary Nash are the sinister figures in the play and Sidney Blackmer and Marcia Mae Jones, his crippled daughter, the kindly dispensers of rich bounty. The well-sustained vein of comedy in the later movements of the tale are intrusted to Arthur Treacher, as the understanding butler in the rich man's home.

Visually and in the character of its musical background, "Heidi" is a masterpiece of beauty. It provides its star with one opportunity to sing an interpolated song with considerable spectacular effect.

Jane Pickens Tops Stage.

The stage proceedings this week are mastered as to ceremonies by that glib Broadway buffoon, Harry Rose, a comedian with a voice far better than the average. Mr. Rose contributes his principal item to the bill from the ramp in front of the orchestra and makes clever use of a tricky medley of twisted songs to relate the history of the Dionne quins. Interspersed with his monologuing are excellent acts by Alexander and Santos, comedy dancers, and their associates; Jane Pickens, one of the famous sisters of that name, and the Salici Puppets. Miss Pickens is a singing comedienne of the first rank on any program, and yesterday afternoon "ran away with the show" in a diversified group of songs, ranging from popular numbers to operatic arias. The headlining Salici Puppets are in a class by themselves as a pretentious exposition of the art of the marionette.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's tuneful overture augment a bill that is efficiently dominated by the blonde Miss Temple at her rapidly maturing best.

Plays Title Role in New Comedy

Having proved his dramatic ability in such picture plays as "Captain Blood" and "Green Light," Errol Flynn now invades the field of comedy and expands his reputation by demonstrating a fine flair for farce. Mr. Flynn, pictured above, is currently seen in "The Perfect Specimen," foremost screen feature for the week at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Joan Blondell is cast opposite.

Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell Head Funmakers; Ace Acts on Stage.

"THE PERFECT SPECIMEN." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Samuel Hopkins Adams, adapted to the screen by Norman Reilly Raine, Lawrence Riley, Brewster Morse and Fritz Falkenstein, starring Errol Flynn, with Joan Blondell, Hugh Herbert, Edward Everett Horton, Dick Foran, Beverly Roberts, May Robson, Allen Jenkins, Dennie Moore, Hugh O'Connell, James Burke, Granville Bates, Harry Davenport and Tim Henning. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

Springing from the facile and prolific pen of Samuel Hopkins Adams, the same fiction source that supplied the screen with "It Happened One Night," this fast-moving and variegated subject boasts more substantial fiber than the common or garden variety of film farces. It is, nevertheless, unalleviated comedy of a rollicking sort that provides meaty roles for a surprising number of players of the first flight.

The handsome young fellow from whom "The Perfect Specimen" derives its name is a cloistered youth heir apparent to important industrial enterprises and a fortune of $30,000,000, whose grandmother incarcerates him in a kind of gold-plated prison. It is her aim to shelter him from all contaminating influences of the outside world and, within the confines of her high-fenced and rambling estate, perfect him in all the arts, sciences and sports so that eventually he will be the superlative leader of men. Through this intensified mental and physical training, Gerald Beresford Wicks becomes an expert in all of the activities in which less favored young men usually are the merest tyros.

Plan Doesn't Work.

But the plans of the acidulous Mrs. Leona Wicks do not work out precisely as she had hoped. One fine day, the handsome daughter of an absent-minded horticulturist crashes the Wicks barricades in her motor car just to find out what this sequestered "perfect specimen" might be like. The contact pleases him and next day he borrows a car and goes in quest of his charming caller. Through her he encounters for the first time the divergent influences of the world of living people. In most casual manner he knocks over burly truck drivers, whips the champion in the prize ring at the truckers' picnic, drives recklessly through torrential rainstorms and registers "double" at a modest wayside inn, in a moment of emergency. The irate grandmother reports it as a kidnaping, probably for $30,000,000 ransom!

But the young Mr. Wicks is equal to the occasion. He breaks his engagement to his grandmama's ward, who marries his new love's roughneck brother; he stampedes Mona into an acceptance of his own hand and generally puts his household in order, according to his own lights—which are very bright lights, indeed.

Errol Flynn, who more and more is taking rank as one of the cinema's most capable actors, here reveals a fine command of high comedy and is equippel with the physical endowments to make his achievements seem wholly believable. In the opposite role of Mona, Joan Blondell plays with a little sounder basis of realism than usually is the case when her ebullient talents are turned loose on so joyous a vehicle. To add to the comic savor of the piece, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Dennie Moore, Edward Everett Horton and May Robson are included in the cast.

Vaudeville Also Scores.

"The Perfect Specimen" is in neither the realm nor the mood of "The Awful Truth" or "Mr. Deeds," but it approaches their rank as a comedy that succeeds in getting off the beaten track and providing amusement that is both spirited and wholesome.

The Earle's stage bill this week is headlined by Block and Sully, the genial cross-fire artists who return to a stage they have trod frequently before to deliver themselves of patter and songs that are partially new and in part familiar. They were received with customary enthusiasm yesterday. Audrey Sieber, celebrating four years of service as mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, also is privileged to reintroduce that brilliant operatic soprano, Marjorie Gainsworth, who returns to Thirteenth street after only a short absence.

—SAT theaters fourth col bell

Her songs yesterday repeated the unequivocal success of her first engagement.

The vaudeville program is opened by the Four Ortons, experts on the tight wire, and is closed by Harris, Claire and Shannon in their intricate triple ballroom dance routines, assisted by Houstin and Hardin, singers and dancers, who yesterday were slightly handicapped, at the beginning, by singing into a dead microphone.

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes supplement a feature that engendered almost continuous laughter at yesterday's first performance.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Idol Chatter: Surprising how many of Hollywood's shapliest sirens keep that way by bowling. Someone must have warned Nelson Eddy about the dangers of highhatting the studio's hired help—he seems to have turned over a new leaf. Hollywood's friendliest personality—Gloria Stuart. I suppose it is forgivable—but the fact remains that Sophie Tucker encouraged the Ritz Brothers early in their careers by awarding them the prize in a dancing contest. Smile alikes: Fredric March and Richard Barthelmess.

SOPHIE TUCKER.

Maybe the reason so many stars are getting married at sea is that they went to give their marriages a pacific start. Collectors Note: Lily Pons is dippy about snuff boxes. Wonder why radio's ace songseller, Gertrude Nieson, never gets a decent chance in pictures—enough letters from her fans might help. Cited for the Croix de Merite: Eddie Cantor— when two workmen on his set were accidentally killed, he learned the amounts of their insurance policies and matched them dollar for dollar. Plenty of exhibitors are predicting profesional disaster for bob Taylor unless the studio bosses wake up and take him out of "pretty boy" roles.

Jeannette MacDonald has a superabundance of every quality that a great star needs excepting one—a sense of humor. Damon and Pythias in Hollywood. Franchot Tone and Ray Milland—a mutual fondness for chess is responsible. If a poll were taken in Hollywood to name the best young bet for stardom, Olympe Bradna would win in a walk. The pride with which James Stewart wears his first mustache is touching. Thorns of stardom: Claudette Colbert's income taxes amount to exactly 78 per cent of her earnings

Samuel Goldwyn is proud of his financial standing, his beautiful wife, his taste in haberdashery and, above all else, proud of his reputation as the "master showman" of Hollywood. Because of that reputation he deliberately flavors everything that he does with drama. When he grants an interview, it is with the condescension of a monarch conferring a boon and, to further impress the scribe, he invariably breaks the interview date three times on the excuse that he is preparing material for the story. And then, when the properly awed reporter finally is ushered into the sanctum sanctorum, the Great Goldwyn completely annihilates him with this stock question. "What is your circulation?" The only writer who ever emerged from the ordeal with flying colors is a famous columnist who promptly retorted, "About twice the number of people that see your pictures." Godwyn tried to hire him.

The "mystery" surrounding Grace Moore's recent opperation reminds me of the amusing faux pas committed by a publicity man two years ago, when she underwent a tonsilectomy. For some reason or other, studios never like to admit that their stars have operations, and Grace's decision to have her tonsils out caused conference after conference. Finally, the genius who, at the time, headed Columbia's publicity department, announced to the press that she had gone "out of town to recover from a cold." That alibi seemed to satisfy the studio—but what a roar of rage it drew from Grace's radio sponsor. Grace, you see, was being paid about $3,000 a week to advertise Vick's Vapo-rub, the great cold preventive.

Wandered around RKO today and among the hundred or more extras on a huge set, met Preston Foster. When I demanded "how come," he very sheepishly explained that he was pinch-hitting for a friend. "He's been having a tough time of it," Preston mumbled, "working extra and trying to support two kids. Today, when I dropped in here, he was so sick he could hardly hold his head up so I told him to go home and I'd fill in. I'm staying in the background and the only person who knows about it is the assistant director. He won't tell—and my friend won't lose his check. I didn't have anything to do today, anyway." Nice guy, Preston Foster. Hollywood could use a few more like him.

JUSTICE: Now that the United States Supreme Court has rejected the appeal of Hayward Patterson, the Scottsboro defendant, there has been much speculation as to what steps next will be taken for the disposition of these cases. . . . The next steps will come from the Alabama Bar Association, which will issue a statement about the injustice of the convictions.

VERSE: The prelude to Gene Fowler's new best seller, "Salute to Yesterday," consists of a poetic effusion about "eyes tired with life, so once again the sweet green fields of youth." . . . This quotation is credited to Charles Francis Devlin. . . . In the book, there is also a long poem, allegedly translated from the old Arabic. . . . The truth is that all this poetry was written by Fowler himself. . . . Charles Francis Devlin is the name of Fowler's father.

YOUTH: The Derlak School, which conducts classes in a West End avenue penthouse, is presenting "The Mikado" for its annual Dramatic Society show. The students who will participate in this presentation are of the modern progressive type, conversant with world affairs. . . . HEALTH: Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt and two guests entered El Morocco the other night and were seated at the best table of this swanky cafe. They sat there for two hours, and then Vanderbilt asked for his check, looked at it, and paid. . . . It was for 75 cents.

FAME: All last week Moss Hart's prankster pals kept phoning his home, saying they were members of Roosevelt's families, and resented being satirized in the new Kaufman-Hart show, "I'd Rather Be Right." The calls were taken by Hart's brother, Bernie. . . . Last Friday a caller, who said he was Mr. Morgenthau—and the Secretary of the Treasury comes in for a severe lampooning in the play—phoned Hart's home, and asked for two opening-night seats. "Uh, huh," Bernie replied, sarcastically, "I suppose this is Mr. Morgenthau, the Secretary of the Treasury, in person, eh?" . . . "Oh, no," the caller identified—and proved—"this is his father, who was America's Ambassador to Turkey."

PLIGHT: Harry Green, the dialectic screen comic, sailed for Europe, accompanied by his wife and one child. Green has another child, a boy who has been left in Hollywood with his grandmother . . . Green didn't take him along because of an alarming situation, that can be remedied only by this opportunity for a separation. For Harry discovered that the youngster gesticulates and talks—exactly the way his father does!

SWANK: Eddie Albert, who portrays the playwright in "Room Service," has to wear white tie, tails and a silk hat in the final scene. At the opening night, and thereafter, Albert wore Producer George Abbott's silk hat. . . . The part has been changed, however, and Albert now nears a soft hat in that scene—all because last week Mr. Abbott went to a swanky affair and had occasion to use his hat.

TRIUMPH: Anna Neagle, star of Herbert Wilcox's production of "Victoria the Great," accompanied her producer to Canada, where they were the guests of Governor General Tweedsmuir and Lady Tweedsmuir . . . The party went to see a preview of the Victoria picture—which was preceded by the newsreel showing Miss Neagle's arrival in America. The newsreel had been rushed to Canada, especially for this showing. . . . It was flashed upon the screen and—mistake of mistakes—it had received no cutting. Six shots of the same scene were repeated, six times the same lines were uttered. . . . Lord Tweedsmuir, anxious to ease the tension, turned to Wilcox, and whispered: "What happened? Is the needle stuck?"

WORRY: The Japanese firms in America are very much excited about the boycott threat. And so they've instructed their 140,000 American employes to organize to protect their jobs. . . . But the Japanese Embassy has ordered complete silence, and so the new organization hasn't even announced its formation. They hold weekly meetings at the Vanderbilt.

Sentiment Develops for Strengthening Soil Conservation Act.

'noncontroversial" features by Monday, suggested the following principles may be agreed on:

Benefit payments to farmers on a basis of limited "tilled acreage," rather than on the actual output of the land.

Referenda among farm producers of each commodity at some stage of the program before compliance was asked.

No criminal penalty or prosecution for failure to restrict acreage, but taxes levied in varying amounts for output over quotas.

Reenactment and extension of the present soil conservation program.

Application of the "ever-normal granary" principle for storage in fat season for use in lean years, to all crops to which it adapts itself.

Financing of the program by some form of processing taxes, probably differing from the old AAA taxes, and called by another name.

No Progress on Corn.

Virtually no progress had been made yesterday on the corn program, although sub committees have been appointed to study plans for corn, as well as cotton, wheat and rice, tobacco and dairying products.

A majority of the cotton subcommittee appeared opposed to a high degree of compulsion in controlling the cotton crop. Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, of South Carolina, chairman of the cotton sub-committee, favored soil conservation benefits to cotton farmers limiting their acreage. Fulmer also suggested a cotton subsidy of 3 cents a pound, and possible additional benefits financed by a low tax on processing of the staple.

Representative Harry B. Coffee, of Nebraska, a member of the wheat sub-committee, was outspoken in his opposition to "compulsory" control of crops. "I don't believe we are going to have it," Coffee said.

Depends Upon Definition.

But Jones said it all depended on tow "compulsory" was defined. He said adjustments will be made to suit the needs of each particular commodity and the only "compulsion" discussed was the amount of the tax imposed on overproduction.

Both Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of Virginia, and Representative Fred Cummings, of Colorado, declared some degree of control is essential. "We just can't throw the gates wide open without having control over production," said Cummings.

Coffee, opponent of rigid control, favors a dual price system, a domestic price and an export price high enough not to undermine home market levels, but insuring a foreign outlet. He said this would "assure the farmer a fair price on the domestic markets and allow him to compete in the world markets with surpluses." He said some agency could buy up the exportable surplus with general funds, or money raised from an "equalization fee."

Two Control Methods in Sight.

Discussions of the committee to date suggest that two methods may be applied in attempted surplus control— first, the benefit payment, or "bait" method on some commodities; second, a steep tax on overproduction in other commodities, with benefits no greater than under the soil conservation act. Wallace discussed the merits of the two methods at a recent press conference, and apparently the House committee is tending toward a combination of the two. The first is largely voluntary, more expensive, but smoother in operation. The second is less expensive, but may encounter rough going in some commodities.

The tobacco sections alone appear strongly in favor of the latter method, and a tentative program to that end will be included in the new bill, subject to later changes.

It operates as follows: Whenever the stock of one type of tobacco reached a given percentage, the Secretary of Agriculture would proclaim a surplus. Marketing quotas would then be fixed and submitted to tobacco farmers in a referendum. If more than two-thirds of the farmers approved, the plan would be invoked, and a tax of 50 per cent imposed on all tobacco sold in excess of quotas. Benefit payments would about parallel those under the soil conservation program.

Funeral Rites Held For Mrs. Johnston, Auto-Crash Victim

Funeral services were held yesterday for Mrs. Marian Campbell Johnston, 58, who was killed Wednesday when a trailer truck crashed an automobile operated by her husband, Joseph Samuel Johnston, 68, on Route 40, near Frederick, Md.

Services were held at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Thirteenth and V streets southeast, with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Mrs. Johnston was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Reverdy King, of Prince Frederick, Md. She is survived by her husband and a brother, Dr. I. N. King, of Prince Frederick.

The crash ended a sunset of life romance which culminated in their marriage last spring at Fredericksburg, Va. The couple had been in Florida until a month ago. They attended the eighty-eighth birthday celebration of Johnston's uncle, Ferdinand Johnston, at Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sunday and had remained there several days visiting Johnston's relatives. They were en route to their home at 2233 Mount View place when the crash occurred.

Johnston is in Frederick Hospital with a broken leg and head injuries.

E. A. Tilene a 'Prophet,' Roosevelt Says in Rites

Rescue Try Fails

FRANKLIN HERRING, JR., collapsed in an attempt to rescue his 11-month-old baby who was burned to death in a fire at his home in Arlington County yesterday. Herring burned both hands in the effort.

Baby Left Alone Perishes as Blaze Repels Her Father

Eleven-month-old Barbara Frances Herring was burned to death in her crib in Arlington County yesterday, despite heroic efforts of her father to save her.

The infant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin B. Herring, was alone in her parents' home, 5729 North Eighth street, Arlington, when flames, believed to have started from an overheated stove, razed the structure.

Herring, a carpenter, was at work on a garage a block away. He arrived just as smoke started billowing from the windows. Smashing his way into the house, he cut his hand as he fought his way toward the crib. Smoke overcame him, and neighbors barely were able to pull him to safety.

"I can't get to her," he gasped.

Mrs. Herring, accompanied by a 2-year-old daughter, was shopping in the neighborhood. They did not return until the fire had been extinguished.

Ballston and Clarendon firemen found the little girl's body in the crib, which they pulled from the one-story structure after they had extinguished the fire.

Grief-stricken, Herring was taken to Georgetown Hospital, where he was treated for cut hands, exhaustion and shock.

Labor Conflict Renewed After One-Day Peace

adopted by the Atlantic City con[illegible] the C.I.O. [illegible] authorizing Lewis to issue such a call "for the purpose of aiding the workers in this industry to unite into one international union."

Lewis said yesterday:

"The C. I. O. has acted in this matter in response to the widespread demand among organized furniture workers for unity and industrial organization. The resolution which it adopted at its Atlantic City conference has already been indorsed by many local unions and endvance indications are that there will be full representation from all parts of the industry and from all unions invited."

Would Lay Unity Base.

The conference, he said, "will lay the basis for unity of all furniture workers in a single powerful, international industrial union, affiliated with the C. I. O. and capable of organizing the 200,000 unorganized furniture workers".

While Lewis did not reveal what method would be used in the organization attempt, two have been followed heretofore in building up the industrial union organization to its present claimed strength of around 3,800,000 workers.

One plan is for the C. I. O. to set up an industrial union in an industry and assist the union in organizing the industry. This of course was followed in the automobile industry, Homer Martin's United Automobile Workers being the organizing medium.

Under the other, the C. I. O. creates an organizing committee, such as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee under Philip Murray, and the Textile Workers Organizing Committee under Sidney Hillman. The C. I. O. committee then takes over all the affairs and funds of the existing union or unions in the industry, provides enough money and organizers to carry on the campaign, and then turns back the enlarged and rejuvenated union to its own officers.

Railroads Seek $508,000,000 In Rate Boosts

Will Ask I. C. C. for 15% More Freight, ½ Cent Passenger Increase.

upon the railroads because the margin between income and operating expenses has been squeezed so thin that they face a real crisis."

"Facing the railroads today is an increase in operating costs totaling $663,303,000 annually since early in 1933. Of that amount, more than half results from new taxes under laws passed by Congress and from a 40 per cent increase in the prices of materials, supplies and fuel. The rest is due to restoration in 1935 of the 10 per cent wage reduction originally made in 1932 and to recent wage agreements with the operating and nonoperating unions.

"The revenue for hauling a ton of freight one mile, or carrying a passenger a mile stands today at 10 per cent of what it was even at the low point of the depression.

"The total net income, earned by the railroads, available for interest, dividends, improvements and reserves was only 2.57 per cent on their investment in 1936. Ninety-six railroad companies are now in the hands of receivers or trustees."

Steady Decrease.

"The average revenue per ton-mile and per passenger-mile has steadily declined since 1921, until today railroads haul a ton of freight 1 mile for an average of less than a cent, and carry a passenger a mile for less than 2 cents.

"Even during the period of great general prosperity, the net income of the railroads, available for interest on debts, dividends to stockholders and improvements to their properties averaged only about 4 per cent on their investment. There was small chance, under those conditions, to retire indebtedness or to accumulate reserves for the depression years which were to come, even had the stockholders during the good years foregone entirely any dividends upon their stock. There was no boom for the railroads.

Because of that situation, the railroads went into the depression without surplus reserves."

Unable to Raise Prices.

"During the depression years they faced a still more difficult situation. As costs of all sorts—materials and supplies, taxes, wages—rose from depression lows, the railroads were not able to meet the rise by following the lead of other industries. They could not increase the price of their product—transportation.

"In an effort to meet the situation the Interstate Commerce Commission on April 18, 1935, authorized certain emergency charges on freight. With modifications, these charges remained in force until December 31, 1936, when they expired, resulting in a reduction in the carriers' revenues of $120,000,000 a year on the basis of 1936 business. On October 22, 1937, the Interstate Commerce Commission authorized a restoration of a portion of this loss of revenue by moderate increases in rates on certain specific commodities, estimated to yield about $47,500,000 a year. That was an appreciated step in the right direction, but manifestly inadequate to meet the necessities of the situation."

ICC Denies Rail Plea.

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission denied yesterday the petition of class 1 railroads and tariff agents to publish increased rate schedules effective on only 15 days' notice.

The proposed schedules would apply to commodities on which hearings were not held preliminary to last week's approval of a $47,500,000 freight-rate increase.

Commission refusal means the railroads must comply with the regular commission rules that new tariffs are effective on 30 days' notice subject to protest or suspension.

2 Children Among 4 Dead in Blazing Home

Cleveland, Oct. 29 (AP).—Four persons, including two children, were found dead tonight in a home which was swept by fire, police reported. Firemen said bodies of a man, woman, girl and boy were found in different parts of the house when they arrived to combat the fire. The committee's busy schedule in Washington yesterday, beginning with an audience in the morning with Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles, ended late in the afternoon at a reception given in the Pan American room of the Mayflower Hotel, from 5 to 7, by Ben Grey, of New York City, a trustee of the National Home Library Association, in honor of the "flying caravan."

Turkish Embassy Marks Founding of Republic With Gay Reception for Washington Society

Ambassador Ertegun Receives Guests; Many Cabinet Wives and Throng of Diplomats Attend; Tables Spread Invitingly With Oriental Dainties.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

To Turkish people around the world, October 29 is a day of rejoicing because it is the anniversary of the proclamation of their republic, but to the scores of guests who filed up the broad stairway at the Turkish Embassy here yesterday, it was mere a reason—and a very good one—for a successful reception that proved the Capital's social season is in high gear.

The affable Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun, received his guests in the spacious, richly-furnished drawing room on the second floor and patiently answered question after question about Mme. Ertegun and when she would return, telling each one who inquired that her visit in Istanbul would be indefinitely extended. From the drawing room guests drifted out to the other rooms and eventually found their way to the long table at one end of the dining room, where a buffet was spread with all the usual dainties one finds at a diplomatic reception and a few other choice ones served only at the Turkish Embassy.

In adjoining rooms champagne and other drinks were served continually during the party, with guests crowding the tables for well over two hours. The ballroom was also a particularly popular spot, with a lively orchestra adding an extra touch of gayety to the affair.

Mrs. W. H. Taft Is Early Arrival

Among the early arrivals were Mrs. William Howard Taft, who recently returned to Washington after being away most of the summer; Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, in a black frock and a small veiled hat, who came early and left early in order to attend the reception at the Mayflower in honor of the "flying caravan," which takes off on its good-will tour today; Mrs. William E. Borah, in a brown ensemble, and Baroness von Below, attired in gray from head to foot.

Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, in a black and ice-blue frock, wore a fox neckpiece and a small black hat. Three other Cabinet wives—Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and Mrs. Daniel C. Rooper—were also there, each the center of animated groups that grew as the party progressed.

As would be expected, the Diplomatic Corps turned out in full force, but for the most part came during the latter half of the party. During that time, any way you looked, your eyes were sure to fall on a couple of Ambassadors and Ministers and their wives, while other members of Embassy and Legation staffs seemed to be everywhere.

Among those I saw in the order mentioned were the Ambassador of Spain and Senora de los Rios, the Ambassador of Germany and Frau Dieckhoff, the latter in a trim black suit trimmed in Persian lamb with a hat to match; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito, the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Troyanovsky, she wearing a hat of black and blue velvet with a dress of the same combination; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

When I first glimpsed the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, he was dancing with Senorita Lulu Quintanilla, sister of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy. Either in the ballroom or the room adjoining it I saw the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik; the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter; Miss Yoeh E. Wang, daughter of the Chinese Ambassador, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy, the Marquis of Sant'-Orsola; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Heywood, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine A. Oumansky of the Soviet Embassy, the First Secretary of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Babes.

Among others there were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, in a high-crowned black hat to match her black suit; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, who said her husband was leaving last evening for Havana, where she expected to join him later; Mrs. Emily Hurja, in a black ensemble; Mrs. Pliny Evans and her pretty daughter, Miss Patricia Evans; Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, who came with Dr. and Senora Requena and their two daughters, Senoritas Irma and Marietta Requena, of Venezuela; Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Assistant Attorney General; General and Mrs. Peyton O. March and Mrs. William T. Mann, who came with her aunt, Mrs. Sims Snow.

Also Representative Virginia Jenckes of Indiana, who recently returned to the Capital and expects to spend most of the winter here; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, who is off to Florida today to spend some time, Mrs. J. J. Mack and many more.

Today he will be entertained luncheon by the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation, Jorgen Gaibe, and this afternoon he will be honored at the reception given by the Minister and Mme. de Morgenstiern at the Legation. Leaving the Capital tomorrow, he will go to Chicago, from there to Boston and then back to New York.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE ONLY APPROPRIATE Halloween decoration missing from the barn dance at Normandie Farms last evening was a ghost. Everything else was there—bright yellow pumpkins, leering jack-o'-lanterns, bunches of bittersweet in small vases on the tables and around the shelves, and autumn squash in brilliant hues of red and other colors.

Some members of the arrangements committee had told their friends it was a costume party, others said it was a barn dance, and some people came in evening clothes. So "motley" is the adjective best befitting the clothes worn. The general impression somewhat resembled a surrealist dream, with guests in everything from witches' hats to farmhand outfits.

A snappy swing orchestra played the latest tunes, and at 12:30 a hearty supper was served consisting of scrambled eggs, mushrooms and caviar, country sausages, hot biscuits and rolls, all topped off by the customary ice cream and coffee. The guests arrived early, many of them coming on from dinner parties, and stayed until the band packed up, and went home in the small hours.

* * * *

ONE OF THE MOST ingenious costumes was that of Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood, wife of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy. She added the appropriate touch to her close-fitting velvet gown and black witch hat by carrying a broomstick.

If there had been a prize, it should have been awarded for the Kiki costume worn by one young lady. Her slinky black satin skirt was slit up the side, her tiny skull cap had two feathers sticking smack up in front, and around her shoulders was a ratty silver fox furpiece.

An attractive newcomer to Washington at the dance was Miss Leita Amory, niece of Mrs. Amory Perkins, of Middleburg. Miss Amory has just come to Washington to spend the winter, and is living with Mrs. Ormsby McCammon. She came in a party which included Miss Betty Hardie, in a gypsy costume which she wore at the Mardi Gras fete in New Orleans last year; Eleanor Patterson Roberts, in a Filipino dress of pina cloth acquired when she lived in Manila with her father, Gen. Robert Patterson, and Herbert Ford and Lieut. Forrest Close, dressed as airplane mechanics.

* * * *

SOMETHING TRULY SNAPPY in the way of costumes was the hula hula outfit worn by Miss Caroline Chantry, the real thing from Hawaii. Several of the foreigners in the Capital came dressed in native costumes. Mrs. Isabella Gest, a Chilean, wore a white frock dotted in red, a silver cross around her neck and silver earings. In her party was Senora de Guachalla, wife of the Bolivian Minister, and also a Chilean.

The Ekengrens, Teenie and Elsie, went farmhand for the evening, the former in a long gingham evening frock and her sister in natural colored slacks and a peasant blouse. Others in similar attire were Nancy Mann, Enid Snow, Diana Rowland and Florence Harris, Louise Powell wore a blue gingham and her hair in pigtails, and Royce Powell was a farmer with a corncob pipe.

* * * *

MEMBERS OF THE BRAZILIAN Embassy canceled a proposed Halloween celebration at the embassy and came to the dance en masse. Luis Zuberbuhler, of the Argentine Embassy, went Alpine in leather shorts and a hat with a feather. Marta and Rebecca Trucco, daughters of the Chilean Ambassador, looked athletic in tennis dresses.

There must have been close to 200 people present last evening, others being Celeste Crosby Miller, Mrs. Gerald Linke, as a Dutch girl; Willa Magee, in evening dress; the Marquis of Sant Orsola and Michal Budny, from the the Diplomatic Corps; Mr. and Mrs. Millard West; Helen and Evelyn Walker, Mrs. McKenney Mallan, Larry Knapp and Hank Whitney, Victor Sutro, who came as a house painter, and Caroline Cecil, who will make her debut in December at the Sulgrave Club.

Miss Cox Guest At Pelley Party

Miss Mary Jane Pelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Pelley, was hostess at a dinner at the Shoreham last evening in honor of one of today's most important brides, Miss Arabel Parker Cox, and Murray Borden, jr., who are to be married this evening at St. John's Church.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Hal V. Worth, of Baltimore; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cannon, of Raleigh, N. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Britt, of Goldsboro, N. C.; Miss Cheshire Cox and Miss Judy King, of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Elizabeth Skinner, of Greenville, N. C.; Mrs. Mary Howard, of Tarboro, N. C.; Miss Hattie Lee Borden, Arnold Borden, John Spicer, all of Goldsboro; James E. Jones, jr., Edward Hamer, Walter Keoun and Albert Lyman Cox, jr.

Col. and Mrs. Brady G. Ruttencutter returned to Washington Thursday from Europe and have taken an apartment at the Martinique for the winter. They have been away since April and during that time attended the British coronation in May, visited with cousins, Mr. and Mrs. John Appleton and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Appleton in Paris, and later in Italy were present at the wedding of the former Miss Agnes Sholls, daughter of the American Consul General in Milan.

Their tour also included trips into Belgium and Switzerland.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should She Give Him Up? Is He Too Old? Asks Girl of 21 Who 'Dearly Loves' Man of 56.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 21 years of age, very much in love with a man 35 years my senior. This man has all the high ideals and character that one could wish for in a man. We have so many things in common that we can not give each other up. He has been married and has grown children. His wife is dead. The question is this: He wants me to decide before I see him again whether I think he is too old for me. If I think so, he will try to give me up.

Mary Haworth, please tell me what to do. I have read your column often in the paper and think you give such sensible answers. Please think carefully before you render an opinion, because I love him dearly—so very much more than I have ever cared for anyone else I have ever known. Please answer as soon as possible, for I must decide.

PUZZLED.

* * * *

DEAR PUZZLED: Although you haven't made your meaning absolutely clear, I gather you are thinking of this man in terms of marriage and that he has left it up to you to decide whether or not he is "too old" to be a suitable husband. I have thought the matter over most carefully and it is my honest opinion that the average man of 56 is much too old to make a suitable husband for the average girl of 21.

* * * *

You must remember that it is no uncommon thing for perfectly normal youths and maidens to develop sudden, intense, idealistic attachments of a purely romantic nature for some person of the opposite sex old enough to be a parent or perhaps a grandparent. All contemporary association seems callow, boring and dismally insufficient while the romantic flare-up burns high. And yet, as a rule, there comes a later day when the scales of infatuation fall from the eyes and the oldster stands revealed to his erstwhile admirer or adorer in his true light—faded, aging, paunchy, grizzled—probably a perfect dear in his way; but certainly no proper substitute for a sweetheart or mate approximately the same age.

* * * *

Therefore, unless you are a definite oddity amongst girls; unless you actually are socially and intellectually precocious, one of those persons of whom we say, "she was born old;" unless you really haven't an ardent emotional nature, but are willing to take these 35 years in your stride and settle down to the man's ways and the man's tempo of life as your way and your tempo, you had better give him up—and set yourself to finding a satisfactory sweetheart among men nearer your own age. For no matter how mature you may think you are, unless you are a bit lopsided in your social development, you will find plenty of complementary-type men in the bracket from 25 to 35, to run the age limit up to what should be the outside notch.

* * * *

Your devotion to this man may mean, simply, that he's the first representative of the opposite sex in whose eye you have found high favor. You may, in your heart, be deeply grateful to him for having noticed you; for having made you feel superlatively charming, winning, desirable, inspiring and companionable. Maybe you haven't yet found yourself, so to speak, where men are concerned; don't know how to get on with creatures; don't feel at ease with them; aren't sure of your power to attract, and hence have gone overboard for the first bait cast in your direction.

* * * *

Maybe the man's attraction for you is based on what the psychologists call a fetishism. To illustrate, maybe you have a father fixation, and in some fleeting way you don't recognize or realize, he suggests your father. This would mean you were attracted to him not at all for any actual qualities he possesses, but only because there is something about him which reminds you of some one else you do admire and would like to have for your own completely.

* * * *

In my opinion, there's something a shade off balance, to put it mildly, about a man of 56 who is romantically interested in an average specimen of 21-year-old girlhood; who would dream of wooing her with matrimonial or lover's intent. Really balanced men of this age couldn't possibly find true mental and social companionship with a woman so young. I doubt that they could find it in any woman less than 30 at the youngest—and the difference between 21 and 30 isn't so much the number of years as it is one of experience and viewpoint on life and human relationships. As a matter of fact an older man's interest in very young girls—or a very young girl—is more often pathological than romantic in nature.

* * * *

In the final analysis, it is not for me to say, arbitrarily, that you should not see this man again; that he is "too old" for you. I can only suggest that you consider the situation very carefully in the light of the foregoing remarks, make your own decision, based on what I hope, for your sake, is certain knowledge of your own nature; and then have the courage and stamina to abide by that decision.

Sex Appeal Attacked As Factor in Success

Sex appeal may help a woman get a job, but it doesn't insure success in the business world, according to a statement made by Mrs. Mary G. Roebling, president of the Trenton Trust Co., Trenton, N. J., at a meeting of the American Bankers' Association recently held in Boston.

Mrs. Roebling said: "Some executives may look for a woman who is window dressing, but the keen man who heads responsbile business organization cares not whether his women co-workers use Christmas Night or April Showers. What he wants is a well-groomed woman, who in the business vernacular has something on the ball."

Smart Jackets to Transform an Evening Gown.

TO MAKE one black evening dress serve for the entire season, the answer is several smart cocktail jackets. The white rayon silk Spanish bolero (at left), with fringed sleeves and a long sash with fringed ends, is one clever solution. A more elegant and glittering interpretation is the short jacket of regal blue sequins (below). The scroll border is outlined with pearly white sequins. The sash, inspired by the Spanish "faha," also of sequins, may be worn with or without the striking bolero.

Jackets Provide One Black Dress Multiple Value

May Transform the Garment to Meet All Occasions.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOUR BUDGET allows only one evening dress this season, the wise purchase is a black dress of good lines and material, and several little cocktail jackets to give the illusion of a more extensive wardrobe. This is not idle talk, but a practical, smart and economical idea, being adopted by many chic women and college girls. And, with fashion playing right into your hand and offering jackets in all kinds of clever materials, stylings and trimmings, there should be no difficulty in assembling a number of good-looking outfits.

The black basic evening dress should be of silk crepe, in any one of the new versions considered smart this year. The lines should be conservative, in order to be adaptable to the several cocktail jacket styles you will want to select. Above all, the neckline should be simple, the dress should be sleeveless, and the waistline should be smooth and molded to the figure. With so many of the smartest evening dresses equipped with jackets of self-material to serve for dinner wear, the idea of ensembling your own is in keeping with current mode as well as economical.

Jackets to top the basic evening dress are of many interesting varieties. There are waist-length fitted affairs with long sleeves, which button right up to the throat; the very short Eton with either long or short sleeves; the bolero in about 1,001 different interpretations. Materials are as numerous as the styling—sequin and sequin-trimmed, velvet, fringe, silk crepe with bright-colored embroidery, braid. Colors, too, are just about anything that you can think of, to change the color scheme of your evening costume. It is surprising how a number of well-selected jackets will entirely change the appearance of the same black evening dress, camouflaging the fact that your evening wardrobe is very limited.

90% of Children Lack Dental Care, Institute Finds

Ninety per cent of the two million babies born in the United States annually are not given the dental care in infancy and early childhood that assures good teeth in adult life, according to the findings of the Dental Institute of America, a scientific study organization of prominent dentists.

"Many mothers seem unaware of the importance of diet and early care of the teeth as an aid both to health and good looks," says the institute.

Suggestions to mothers as set forth by the institute are:

Take the child to a dentist for inspection at the age of 2½ years. Decayed spots should be removed and cavities filled.

At 4, ill effects from thumbing and other bad habits should be detected and corrected by means of appliances. By 5 the dentist can determine the jaw growth in regard to permanent teeth and make necessary corrections.

At 6 and 7, six-year molars should be examined for defective development.

Between 8 and 10, crooked teeth should be placed in bands of braces.

Corrections should be made in weak grooves or faulty enamel in the tenth and eleventh years. From 12 to 14, new molars should be looked after.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

Cure for Beri-Beri.

Beri-beri is a form of paralysis due to nerve degeneration which occurs almost exclusively in rice-eating countries. But not necessarily is it seen only in rice-eating populations. For instance a Danish whaling expedition reported as late as 1930, 51 cases of beri-beri occurring on one ship on which no whole-meal bread was eaten.

In a prison in Elizabeth, N. J., white bread was used almost as a staple article of diet, and beri-beri broke out among the prisoners. They were cured by the use of brown bread.

A shipwreck prevented beri-beri in Labrador when, in 1910, a ship ran ashore with a cargo of whole-meal wheat flour, and in order to lighten her a considerable portion of her load was removed and consumed by the people in adjacent districts. The result was that no case of beri-beri was reported in that region for a period of one year following this event.

These facts have nothing to do with the controversy as to whether white bread or whole-wheat bread is the more healthy. If wheat were the only article in the dietary which could provide Vitamin B, it is true that it would be healthier to eat whole wheat bread.

Beri-beri occurs occasionally in the peculiar form of alcholic neuritis. It was long supposed that this neuritis was due to the degeneration of nerves by alcohol itself, but it has been found that the use of concentrated Vitamin B will cure the neuritis after it occurs, and if the alcoholic will eat a mixed diet along with his alcohol, a diet sufficiently mixed to contain Vitamin B, alcoholic neuritis will not develop.

As a remarkable corrollary of this occurrence of neuritis in alcoholics, an exactly opposite picture was reported in a certain island in Polynesia. The natives there were in the habit of consuming an alcoholic beverage prepared from yeast. Yeast is a good source of Vitamin B. The League of Nations stepped in and prohibited its use. The result was that inebriety disappeared among the adults only to be replaced by outbreaks of beri-beri among the breast-fed infants. The forbidden beverage had been their mainstay against beri-beri. Faced with this dilemma, the authorities permitted the reintroduction of the toddy, and the infant death rate fell from 50 to 7 per cent.

For the benefit of prohibitionists, it may be known that no patented rice or white flour—only whole-meal flour and brown rice — may be purchased on this island now, so that the infants can get their Vitamin B without the necessity of having mama get a little bit intoxicated.

Men Are Advised to Buy Dinner Coats, Not Tails

New Yorfk, (AP)—The frost is on the pumpkin in a lot of localities and the perennial question is ringing out of whether a man who can afford only one evening rig should buy a dinner jacket (tuxedo) or tails.

The answer, by all means, without exception or equivocation, is buy a dinner jacket. The number of places and occasions where a dinner jacket won't do instead of tails is infinitesimal and—and this is the crux of the whole problem—a man who can't afford tails has practically no occasion to go to the places where they might be de rigeur.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 29.

I'M SITTING in the dark auditorium of Broadway's fam old Winter Garden scene of many a famous girl-show these many years. Rehearsals of Uncle Ed Wynn's new opera, "Hooray for What," are going on. Suddenly the coatless band strikes up a swingy tune, and a pretty little girl steps to the footlight trough and begins to sound off. She's Mrs. William Harrison Dempsey (or Jack to most of us), and mother of his two little daughters—returning to the show business she left in 1931 to marry Roger Wolfe Kahn, whom she later sloughed off.

ALICE HUGHES

Hannah Williams Dempsey is only 25 now, and a real cutie. In her late teens she whammed us when she sang "Cheerful Little Earful" in a revue of that era. She was Broadway's pet find of the season. Jack, the retired box-fighter, married her after her divorce from Kahn and his from Estelle Taylor, film pip. Her return to the stage has caused a lot of dust to rise in certain circles, since her younger child, Jaqueline, is only 14 months old, and Joan's but three.

* * * *

"Jack's happy about my return," she told me between warbles. "The part and the songs are fine. Anyway, he wants to see what I look like behind the footlights, for he's never seen me on the stage. It's possible to have a career and be a good mother, too. I shan't be neglecting my kids—I'll be with them every day as usual." And she loped back to the stage to rip off another verse and chorus.

* * * *

Nice little group, the Dempseys. Jack's a great family man, and the old mauler dotes on his cute frau and his progeny. They live in a nice apartment overlooking Central Park, and Jack spends most of his time at home when not shaking hands with admiring visitors at his big Eighth avenue eating house. Surely we'll all be glad to see Hannah on the stage again. Swell little performer.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Tyrone Power, every inch the movie Dream Man, popped shyly into town the other morning disguised as a "Mr. Gallagher," but shucks! He didn't fool we'uns for a second, and the little girls gave him the usual treatment by running him bowlegged. About the first thing he did was to take Janet Gaynor eating and dancing, for she seems to be the No. 1 Babe now in place of Sonja Henie, the dimpled Scandihovian skater . . .

A book of poetry is selling like crazy, but that's because it is really good poetry—the collected works of the late Sara Teasdale, who wrote the most beautiful love lyrics of her time. Macmillan tells me they've disposed of 10,000 copies three weeks after publication—a phenomenal record for verse. Beautiful stuff it is!

* * * *

Cecil Beaton, the British photographer and pet of the local society set, has been scattering his gilt-edged smart cracks about town recently. The other day he said "Norma Shearer's face is so clean you could eat off it," and the listeners like to died, they did indeed . . .

* * * *

The newest store to catch my avid eye is "The Map Shop," pened by the classic topographers, Rand-McNally, from whose atlases some of us learned the location of Tierra del Fuego, which we promptly forgot. There are millions of map-nuts in the world, and how they'll go mad for this new shoppery, with its maps, globes, atlasses, almanacs and guides. It's on Fiftieth street, in Rockefeller Center, if you're an addict.

* * * *

A Fifth avenue store has just caught the idea of installing a smart girl to act as clothes counselor for bachelors, who are so often lost and befuddled when buying duds without a Wise Little Woman. "The wife pro tem" is Alice Chooljian, 23, from over in Jersey. Alice says she prepped for the job by helping Pop and Brother buy their clothes for several years. Seems to me like an exceptionally crafty notion!

I've often told you about the various sports-trains that steam from Forty-second street to open country—for skiing, boating and bike-riding. This week a brand new one chuffed out of town—a "husking bee train" which hauled a load of overalled and ginghamed youngsters to Kent, Conn., for one of those fall jamborees. Most of the kids had never even heard of such an orgy, but they'll try everything. All for $3, trip, food and so on. Railroads are getting smart!

League of Nations Group Reports World-Wide Diet Principles.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU are interested in nutrition and its relation to health and progress, you could find no better source of information than the final report of the mixed committee of the League of Nations on nutrition. This report, which has just been published, covers every phase of nutrition. Of special interest to the average person is the report on principles of nutrition, special diet needs for different classes and age groups, and the relation of income to nutrition.

While the problems of nutrition necessarily vary from one part of the world to another, the ultimate goal must be everywhere the same: to insure that all sections of the population obtain an adequate diet. These nutritional needs will be met by a variety of different food combinations, but the principles of correct nutrition remain the same.

The report defines an adequate diet as one which supplies the necessary substances for growth and repair (protein), sufficient calories in fuel foods to meet the energy needs of the body (fats, sugars, starches, proteins), plus the essential food elements (vitamins and minerals) which are required in relatively small quantities.

A useful division of foods into two classes is made in the report, the protective foods and the energy-bearing foods. In the protective group are minerals, vitamins and "good" protein. In the highly protective foods the following are included: milk, cheese, eggs, liver, fat fish, butter, cod liver oil, green vegetables, raw fruits, fruit juices. "Good" protein is that supplied by milk, eggs and glandular animal tissue, and it was estimated that about 50 per cent of the protein in a diet should be of animal origin.

The nonprotective foods, chiefly valuable as energy providers, include legumes, cereals, bread (white), rice (polished), nuts, sugar, honey, jam, margarines and vegetable oils.

An insufficient amount of energy-bearing foods—calories, causes loss of weight. A lack of protective foods causes various "deficiency" diseases, which may develop in spite of an abundant calorie intake.

Statistical evidence shows that food habits, at least in many parts of Western communities, have gradually been tending to change in the right direction. These communities are, on the whole, now consuming in addition to the indispensable foods of high energy value, more milk and dairy products, more fruit and more vegetables than a generation ago. This movement toward better nutrition has largely resulted from the unconscious and instinctive groping of men for a better and more abundant life.

The movement toward nutrition has made considerable progress, but it has not gone nearly far enough.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S A QUEEN of her own 50-foot domain with a pair of devoted courtiers at her beck and call. And she always manages to keeep herself and the place looking the part, so we asked her one day for her recipe.

"Well, I think there are all kinds of men, and a lady has to decide which kind she has and be governed accordingly." Some men go in for fine housekeeping in a big way and get an awful store by fancy cooking. And others are more interested in books and politics. Others like things around the house to be beautiful and tranquil, including the lady of the house. My husband happens to belong to the latter category. He isn't death on dirt, and food doesn't mean everything in the world to him, so I don't have to spend hours cleaning and cooking as long as I keep the place reasonably neat and have good whole some food on the table. He's not any literary light and he'd rather garden than talk about Japanese trade. But he does like the place to look smart and colorful and he takes great pride in my appearance and my clothes. So I give more time to keeping myself up than a lot of women. I don't mean I'm advocating that for everybody. Maybe your husband would notice more about what you know of the Spanish situation or the book of the hour than how nice a manicure or wave you have. But mine notices everything about my appearance and takes a lot of interest in my clothes so I concentrate on those things.

"Recently I decided that I ought to have a dressing table in my bathroom for convenience in fixing up. But the only available wall space, where a dressing table might be placed, was too narrow to accommodate even a small kidney table. I couldn't afford any made-to-order furniture so I put on my favorite thinking cap and devised as pretty and dainty a make-up unit as ever you could find. First I bought a bed tray, the sort on folding legs which you place in front of you when reclining in bed, that is of course if you have time to recline. The top of this one was shaped a lot like a kidney table, only smaller, so it fit my space and it was painted pale green to match my bathroom. This I placed on a frame that my husband made out of odd pieces of lumber. For proportion and comfort's sake this was built a bit higher than the usual dressing table so that our bathroom hamper-bench could do double duty both as a dressing table seat and as a hamper, and at the same time slide under the dressing table when not in use. The tray and stand then got a skirt of waterproof oil silk in pale green with black figures, and a small mirror attached to the wall above completed the job."

Teen-Age Etiquette

What a give-away Kits' manners are. She wants to date and go places but at the football game she clambers out of the car like a schoolgirl on a picnic.

Jill knows better. She's as new at being a sophisticated grown-up as Kit, is, yet she smilingly waits for Jim to hop out and give her an assisting hand. And how Jim appreciates her smooth behavior—the poised way she waits for him to open doors for her, to get chairs and help with her wraps.

Knowing these little points of etiquette often is the only difference between being a dud and a knockout—and you can learn them in jig time.

At introductions be gracious with "How do you do?" Nobody says "Pleased to meet you" any more.

If you have a dancing date at a hotel with Dick—and Jack pops up for a dance—introduce the two boys. Ask Dick if he minds, before you dance away.

Or suppose you've a date with a perfectly marvelous boy. You want him to come again, soon. It's up to the boy to ask when he can see you again. But you can help things along by saying, "We've had fun tonight, haven't we?"

If he asks you to tea, be sure your table manners are perfect. Eat thin dry sandwiches and little cakes with your fingers, gooey sandwiches and cakes with a fork. Don't brace yourself on your elbows and coddle your tea cup with both hands. Sit gracefully erect, hold your cup by the handle. Your date will be proud of you.

At the movies, at dances, at house parties, etiquette helps you to blossome into popularity. Our 40-page booklet, ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS, tells what to do on all occasions. How to treat the boy who pets. Boys' codes, too.

Diet Experts Get Recipes In Richmond

Dreams Fulfilled on Convention Delegates' Southern Food.

By Jean Green.

SOUTHERN cooking, America's most romantic food tradition, has much to offer the modern housewife, members of the National Dietetic Association discovered during their recent convention in Richmond. Not only did the dietitians find their fondest culinary dreams fulfilled in the fried chicken, baked ham, Brunswick stew, hot biscuits, corn pone, Southern barbecue, and candied yams, but they found the recipes for these Southern delicacies had been made practical for today's usage through the aid of science.

JEAN GREEN.

Through home economics research and experimentation, Miss Blanche Tansil, of the Woman's College, University of North Carolina, and members of the Virginia Association had made available to the dietitians recipes for many of the delicious Southern dishes that appeared on their menus.

These recipes were taken from "receipt books" that were yellow with age and that had frayed edges and thumbed pages from much use. They were dishes that had been made by colored mammies who presided with devotion over the old plantation "cook houses." The recipes were handed down as "han'fuls" of this and "pinches" and "dashes" of that. The art of cooking, mixing, and seasoning, which had developed to such a high degree before the Civil War, depended often on the instinct of the cook. Some of the recipes called for four dozen eggs, others for two pounds of butter and a quart of cream. Expense meant nothing and there was a lavish use of "sweetin'," "shortenin'," and "seasonin'."

Recipes Made Practical.

In modernizing these recipes, there was much experimentation needed to get proportions standardized and to make them practical for the average housewife. Changes were needed to make them more economical. Often modern food products were substituted in order to shorten the time of preparation.

Many of these recipes I brought back for you. I especially enjoyed the Southern hot breads. At every meal there were crisp crusted hot biscuits, moist, tender Sally Lunn, Beaten biscuits, or batter bread. Corn breads were made from the white corn meal water ground between huge stones. They were served hot so that butter spread on them drizzled into their tender, soft surface. Yams were baked in the peeling until the juice oozed out and they were served hot with butter. The Southern cole slaw was served with a "hot" egg sauce.

The fruit canapes that prefaced the exhibitors' luncheon is a grand idea for a party. The thick wedges of avacados, Satsumas and persimmon were served on sea grape leaves with rounds of Florida limes. The barbecue sauce used on the sliced pork was seasoned to perfection. Here is the menu:

Luncheon.

Florida fruit platter
Sliced barbecued pork with barbecue sauce
Cole slaw
Baked yams
Corn pones Hot biscuits
John Marshall cream pie
Coffee Tea Milk

Virginia biscuits are made with buttermilk with plenty of lard. They should be lightly kneaded to make a fine texture, rolled thin, and baked in a hot oven until brown. Here is the recipe:

Hot Biscuits.

2 cups of flour
½ teaspoon of soda
2-3 teaspoon of salt
3 tablespoons of fat
Buttermilk to make a soft dough (approximately ¾ cup)

Sift the flour, soda, and salt together. Add the fat and cut or rub into the flour. Add milk to make a soft dough. Knead lightly and roll ½ inch thick. Cut and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees).

The buffet supper, served before the evening of Southern folk lore, was one of the outstanding events. Here is the menu and the recipe for a Brunswick stew, modernized.

Buffet Supper.

Lynnhaven Oysters on Ice
Horseradish sauce saltines
A sampling of Brunswick stew
Crackers
Old Dominion Deviled Crabs
A salad platter of Smithfield ham and beaten biscuits
Old-fashioned potato salad
Stuffed eggs
A relish platter of pin-money cucumber pickles, peach pickles, and chow-chow
Syllabub
Pound cake Spice cake
Salted peanuts Coffee
Squirrel, if available, may be used, in place of the chicken as given in this recipe.

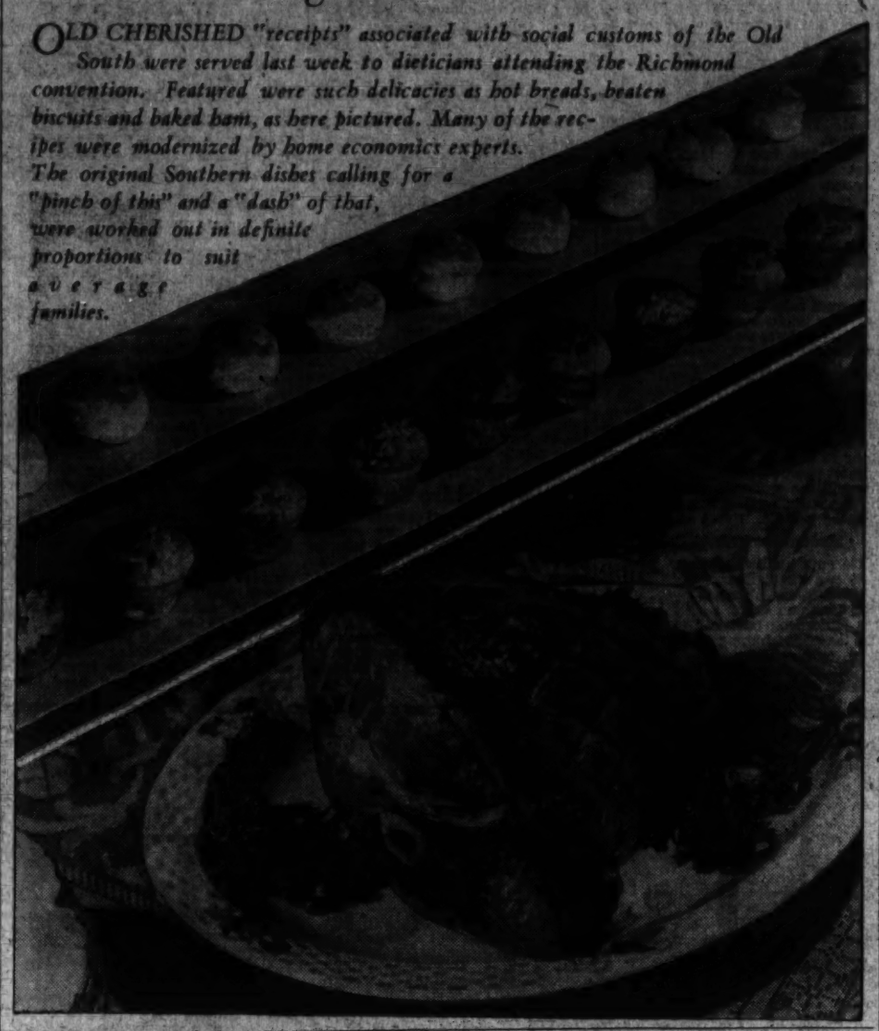
Brunswick Stew.

2 tablespoons of bacon fat
2 onions
3 tomatoes, peeled and quartered
Worcestershire sauce
Salt
Pepper
3 ears of green corn
1 frying-size chicken
3 cups of water
½cup of sherry wine
½ cup of bread crumbs
1 pound of fresh lima beans
½ cup of okra

Brown the onion in the bacon fat, then add the chicken, which has been cut into small pieces and seasoned. When chicken is done, pour off grease, and put chicken and onions in the Dutch oven. Add water, tomatoes, sherry wine and Worcestershire sauce. Cook slowly over a low flame for ½ hour, then add the lima beans, okra, and corn cut from the cob. Let simmer for 1 hour. Add butter and bread crumbs and cook ½ hour longer.

From Old Virginia—Ham and Hot Breads

OLD CHERISHED "receipts" associated with social customs of the Old South were served last week to dieticians attending the Richmond convention. Featured were such delicacies as hot breads, beaten biscuits and baked ham, as here pictured. Many of the recipes were modernized by home economics experts. The original Southern dishes calling for a "pinch of this" and a "dash" of that, were worked out in definite proportions to suit average families.



Cooking Hints

Try making edible place cards for children's parties. A simple one may be made by cutting out cards 1 by 2 inches in size. Bake them carefully and then write the name of each guest on his card with thin icing squeezed through a pastry tube.

Try dipping fish filets in yellow corn meal, in milk, and again in corn meal. Then fry them in deep fat until they are well browned.

Good beef or pork or calves' liver is very bright in color and has little odor. Remember these points when selecting it.

To keep white sauce hot and free of lumps place it in a double boiler over a low fire and cover it tightly.

Place a folded cloth under the dish which contains foods to be beaten. The cloth saves the table and helps keep the dish steady.

Sunday night treat—Cooked sausages inserted in tomatoes, sprinkled with cheese and baked for 20 minutes.

Tomato bisque is glorified by topping each serving with a teaspoon of lightly whipped cream and a dash of powdered mace.

Split pea soup should be cooked with a ham bone and eight whole black peppers.

To lighten the task of sprinkling clothes on washday, try spraying them with a fine soft mist from your rubber hose.

Sandpaper baby's new shoes and he will not slip when learning to walk.

Eggs on Biscuits.

Try baking eggs on biscuits or English muffins. The latter should be baked before their centers are removed and the uncooked eggs inserted. The biscuits or muffins should then be placed on a flat pan in a moderate oven until the eggs have set (about ten minutes). A small quantity of grated cheese may be sprinkled over them.

Pumpkin Recipes May Win a Prize In Post's Contest

WHEN the frost is on the pumpkin, it is time that it be transformed into all kinds of appetizing dishes. Pumpkin pies, pumpkin cokies, pumpkin chips will delight as well as satisfy the yen for special fall dishes. What is your favorite dish made from the pumpkin. The Favorite Recipe Contest this week invites answers to this question. Recipes for fall squash also are included in the contest.

Pumpkin and squash pies are old-fashioned desserts that continue to keep first place on the dinner menu. They may be served with whipped cream and honey or made light with whipped gelatin and egg white, but their smooth texture and spicy taste has a never failing appeal. The fall squash can be steamed, baked, or buttered and served with chopped nuts or with grated cheese. It can also be made into croquettes.

Five awards are made in the contest. The first is for $3, the second for $2, and three for $1 each.

Write your recipe giving clear directions for preparation and mail to Miss Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before November 6.

Lemon and Onion Will Combine Well

There are a great many cases where lemon and onion flavoring combine to advantage. Fish steak or fillets are delicious when seasoned with lemon juice and grated onion.

If your family objects too strenuously to onion in quantity, try putting just one onion in the corner of the roasting pan with the meat to give extra flavor to the gravy. You'll find that the gravy is much better seasoned if the roast has been flavored with the onion.

For the onion devotee, there's nothing like a little minced or grated onion mixed with a vegetable salad, or thin onion rings, which not only give the flavor but may be used for garnish as well.

Ice Freshens Bouquet.

To freshen a bouquet place several cubes of ice in the bowl. That will do the trick without making it necessary to move or rearrange the flowers.

Cocktail Party Has Manners Of Its Own Here

Urging Others to Drink Is Classed as a Social Error.

By Margaret Wallace

A NEW CODE of cocktail party etiquette is being written in our National Capital with the new independence of "drink or do not drink as you please." The well-arranged cocktail party tray or table includes not only varities of cocktails but also orange and tomato juice.

It is considered very bad form to make any comment as to whether guests take liquor or orange or tomato juice cocktails. Those who frown on social errors list as among the most serious ones such comments as "I am off the Demon Rum," or "I am on the waterwagon" or "Come on, be a sport, one drink never hurt anybody." Just as bad taste in the curriculum of modern cocktail party manners are those who gush over their enjoyment of their drinks.

Tray Place for Glasses.

There is much room for improvement at the present day cocktail parties in the manners of many of the guests in disposing of their glasses. In homes where there are enough servants trays are passed among the guests. Some hostesses have a tray or table arranged so the guests may place their glasses there. But in both cases it is not unusual to notice guests placing their empty glasses on the mantelpiece and even on the piano or radio, putting them on the floor beside their chairs or on window sills. Persons who pride themselves on their good breeding are sometimes guilty of such bad manners. If there are no servants with trays to take the glasses, and no special tray or table arranged for them, the guest should return them to the table from which the cocktails are being served.

One hostess relates a story that after her guests at a cocktail party had departed she found glasses in the fireplace, among the books in the bookcase and even under the pillows on the sofa, although she had provided a table on which to place the empty glasses and had several servants going about with trays. It is a very simple matter for a guest to hold a glass until the servant comes for it.

It is quite proper to take a full glass from a tray of cocktails that is being passed and place the empty one on the tray in its place.

Flourishing Bad Form.

Men guests should be alert to take the glasses from the women guests and place them on the table or on the trays of the servants.

It is not considered good form to flourish cocktail glasses about as a demonstration of the enjoyment of the drink or to impress assembled company with the flourisher's sophistication. The art of cocktail drinking should be studied by the woman of today with as much care as the women of other days studied the use of the fan or the lace-trimmed handkerchiefs.

The well-bred cigarette smoker, whether it be man or woman, will never be guilty of flicking cigarette ashes in cocktail glasses. There are always ash trays provided. It is inexcusable bad manners also to use vases, fireplaces and window sills for ash trays. This is one of the prime annoyances of hostesses who entertain cigarette smoking guests.

It is never polite to take more then one canape or cracker or sandwich at a time at a cocktail party or any other kind of a tea party for that matter. The guests who help themselves to two or three such things at once are guilty of very bad manners. It is proper to take another one after the first one is eaten. Most hostesses are flattered when their guests enjoy the refreshments they provide.

Casserole Dishes.

Casserole dishes are favorites for displaying ingenuity in style and flavors of food combinations. Salmon with boiled rice, whole kernel corn and green peppers and seasoned with some pet herb such as marjoram, rose marie or garlic can make a very tasty dish.

Stuff Spout of Pot.

Hint to the new housewife: Stuff soft paper in the spout of the coffee pot while you're waiting for the new husband to get down to breakfast. The delicious aroma won't escape then.

Capital Dishes

Stag Luncheon of Secretary Hull Features Squab and Chicken.

WHEN diplomats dine, what do they eat? Especially at a stag luncheon? This question was answered Thursday in an interesting menu served at the luncheon given by Secretary Hull at the Carlton Hotel in honor of Dr. Halvdan Koht, minister of foreign affairs of Norway.

The menu may have some suggestions for answering the eternal question of what men like. Exquisitely served, it satisfied the masculine palate, so 'twas said.

Menu for the Stag Luncheon.

Cream of mushroom soup.
Melba toast.
Chablis cruse.

Mousse de sole Cardinal.

Boneless squab chicken (Derby) stuffed with rice and foie gras.
Puree of peas.
Finger rolls.
Chateau Mouton Rothschild.

Hearts of romaine, alligator pear and grapefruit salad.

Souffle Grand Marnier.
Cigars. Coffee. Cigarettes.
Cliquot, yellow label.

The table was decorated with a profusion of fall flowers. Bronze and yellow chrysanthemums predominated.

Peanut Butter Frosting.

Try peanut butter frosting for covering white or spice cakes. Add one-third of a cup of peanut butter to your regular uncooked white frosting. Blend in the peanut butter well before icing the cake. Add a few roasted peanuts as decoration.

Use Shallow Pan.

Pans used in baking biscuits should not be too deep. Otherwise the biscuits will not brown evenly on all sides. Select a pan that is about one inch deep.

Stain Remover.

To remove cigarette stains from brass ash trays, rub the trays with a paste of salt and vinegar. Then wash them well in hot water and soap suds.

Autumn Makes Parties Simple For Hostesses

Rules of Etiquette and of Menu Are Off for Afternoon Teas.

WHEN autumn comes the housewife's fancy turns to tea parties and pleasant hours spent with friends around the fireside. With candles lighted on the mantle, a fire glowing on the hearth, and her shining tea service in front of her, she has a smiling welcome for those who drop in for a cheering cup.

Whether her domain be a Park avenue penthouse or a bandbox bungalow, she knows that small informal teas are probably the most enjoyable, convenient and budgetable forms of entertaining. There are no rigid rules of etiquette to bother her, no hors d'oeuvres, soups and salads to worry about, and certainly none of the complications of a dinner party or reception.

She is free to invite whom she pleases and serve what she likes, be it one or a dozen dishes. Some afternoon tea hostesses serve nothing but thin slices of buttered bread. Others prefer little tea cakes or wafers and sandwiches. There is no rule that says one is better than the other. Small teas spell freedom for the hostess.

Cinnamon Toast Popular.

One of the most popular things to serve with tea is cinnamon toast. It's simple to make, and delicious to taste. First cut the bread in thin slices and toast to medium brown. Cut diagonally and butter while still hot. Then spread on a mixture of sugar and cinnamon. Usually a tablespoon of cinnamon is sufficient to give just the right flavor to half a cup of sugar. This, however, is a matter for individual taste.

If sandwiches are to be served, few are daintier and more appetizing than cucumber sandwiches. Cut the bread in thin round slices and spread with mayonnaise. Peel cucumber and slice. Place a slice on the round of bread, add salt and pepper, and cover with another slice of bread. These require little time to make and have a popular appeal.

Try Crumb Cookies.

Or, there are chocolate crumb cookies—a tasty dish to serve with tea. You'll need 2 squares of unsweetened chocolate, 1 1-3 cups (or 1 can) of condensed milk, 1 cup toasted bread crumbs, a pinch of salt, ½ cup walnut or nut meats, and about 2 dozen walnut or pecan halves.

Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk and stir over boiling water 5 minutes. Add toasted bread crumbs, salt and chopped nut meats. Blend thoroughly. Drop by spoonful onto buttered baking sheet. Press half a nut meat into top of each cookie. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for ten minutes or until brown. Remove from pan at once.

Any one of these or all three make for a perfect tea party.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

THERE'S a bright fashion outlook for clothes-loving juniors this season, with Claire Tilden designing such fascinating two-piecers as Pattern 461! So simple are its pattern pieces that an ambitious junior can make this style-wise little frock in no time (aided by the accompanying detailed sewing guide) and wear it for everyday all winter long! Pleasing to the eye are its trim front 'n' back yokes, choice of long or short sleeves, handy patch pocket and action-pleated skirt. And all this youthful chic is topped by a flattering pointed collar whose very simplicity spells smartness. Ideal in wool.

Pattern 461 is cut in girls' and juniors' sizes 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 14 blouse requires 1¼ yards 54-inch fabric; skirt and collar 1¼ yards 54-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (preferably coins) for this pattern. Write clearly size, name, address and style number.

Football Lunch Recipe Is Given

Cheese Salad Sandwich Is Nourishing, Attractive.

At this time of the year there is always a seasonable need for a sandwich of substantial ingredients which will adequately fill up the inner man and his girl after the football game.

There is a fruit that competes with meat in its ability to answer that earnest S O S for real food after an afternoon on the bleachers or on the field. Sliced or chopped ripe olives add energy values to any sandwich filling of meat, eggs, cheese or sea food. A less hearty combination consists of finely chopped vegetables, such as celery, sweet green peppers and carrots. Or a balanced blend of any of these may be seasoned with pimientos, canned green chili peppers, mustard, horseradish, chili sauce or catsup.

The recipe below provides an inexpensive sandwich filling.

Cheese Salad Sandwich.

2-3 cup sliced or chopped ripe olives
1 cup grated American cheese
3 tablespoons tomato catsup
½ teaspoon prepared mustard
Mayonnaise
Bread and butter

Combine ripe olives, cheese, catsup, mustard and sufficient mayonnaise to give spreading consistency and blend. Spread on buttered slices of bread and top with second slice of buttered bread.

Buckwheat Cakes Gain Favor On District Breakfast Tables

When Served With Little Pig Sausage, Combination Also Provides Delicious Evening Meal; Recipes for Old-fashioned and Modern Batters Offered.

By Jean Green.

CERTAIN Washington restaurants now are featuring buckwheat cakes. These wholesome cakes are served hot off the griddle with maple sirup and melted butter spread over them. The result is a favorite masculine dish that gives a hint for a smart informal supper.

There is nothing new about buckwheat cakes, as they were popular in colonial days. But it seems that during the years they were forgotten and now they are staging a come-back in a slightly varied form. The new recipe for them has softened the taste and blended the buckwheat flour with white flour. I think you will like this combination. They can be made on the electric grill and served with hot maple sirup or with brown sugar and and thick cream.

Little pig sausages, or grilled Canadian bacon or Virginia ham would make an excellent accompaniment.

Raised With Yeast.

The old-fashioned recipe still is "tops," as far as flavor goes. These are raised with yeast and the flavor is slightly sour and piquant. The recipe takes little time to make but must be started the night before. The thin batter or sponge is left overnight to become light and airy. Then in the morning the rest of the buckwheat flour is added, some molasses, salt, soda and butter and the pancakes baked. Mother used to save out a part for a "starter." This meant that a small part of the sponge took the place of the yeast the next evening.

The old-fashioned recipe used only buckwheat flour. However, the cakes are lighter if white flour is used in preparing the sponge, then buckwheat flour added in the morning.

Can Use Baking Powder.

Quickly prepared buckwheat cakes are possible. There are several prepared flours on the market that need only water added. The directions for making are on the package.

Quickly prepared cakes also can be raised with baking powder instead of yeast. A small amount of molasses gives a good color to the cakes. Purchase the flour in small quantities, as it is rather hard to keep fresh in the average apartment. It must be kept cool and covered.

Here are two recipes for your files. Also an excellent recipe for a German favorite, apple pancakes. These were first tasted in a Rumanian inn along the North Shore of Chicago. They were served on a huge platter, and were the whole dinner.

Old-Fashioned Buckwheat Cakes.

1 yeast cake
¼ cup lukewarm water
2¾ cups buckwheat flour
4 cups water
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons molasses
¼ teaspoon soda
2 tablespoons melted butter

Soften the yeast in the lukewarm water. Add only enough buckwheat flour to make a thin batter. Cover and let rise overnight. In the morning add the molasses, salt, soda and butter. Mix well. Cook on a well-greased griddle. Serve with butter.

Modern Buckwheat Cakes.

1½ cups buckwheat flour
½ cup wheat flour
1 tablespoon molasses
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
4 teaspoons baking powder
1½ cups milk

Sift the flour with the salt and baking powder. Melt the butter. Add to the milk. Add molasses. Mix with the dry ingredients and stir only until well blended. Bake on a slightly greased griddle.

Apple sauce may be substituted for the chopped apples in the following recipe. Use flavored apples that have a tart taste. They are best if made thick. Be sure to use much butter on the grill or skillet and cook at moderate temperature until well browned and "baked through."

Apple Pancakes.

2½ cups flour
1 cup chopped apples
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoons butter

Sift the dry ingredients. Beat the egg well. Melt the butter. Add to the milk. Add beaten egg. Mix with the dry ingredients and stir well. Add the chopped apples. To make the pancakes thick, use less milk. For the thick filling type only 1½ cups of milk are needed. Bake on a lightly greased hot griddle.

Individual Ice Creams.

Dainty individual molds of ice cream may be made by melting chocolate candy bars and pouring part of the melted chocolate into paper baking cups. Tilt the cups to coat the sides and bottoms and then quickly fill them with ice cream. Let the molds stay in the freezing tray of the mechanical refrigerator or in a mold buried in salt and ice for about an hour. Discard the cups before serving time.

War Goes On—But So Does The Chinese Street Peddler

Returning Traveler Tells of Fresh-Baked Breads and Cakes Sold From Baskets Slung About Neck; Mutton Sandwich Is a Popular Delicacy.

A traveler returning from China and Japan recently found time to observe quaint food customs in China. The street peddler or merchant still carries his wares from house to house. Fresh baked Chinese breads and cakes are one of the popular "hawked."

In distributing the Chinese cruller or doughnut, the peddler carries his wares in a large flat bamboo basket slung about his neck. The same peddler markets a small wheat bun known as "shao ping." The shao ping is baked with sesame seeds on top. It is eaten sandwich style with a filling of roast mutton soaked in pickled garlic and parsley sauce.

Other types of cakes sold are the "kang loa" a flat, round cinnamon-flavored cake, the "poa t'sui," a thin dry cracker about the size of a griddle cake but almost as thin as paper, and the "tzu erh po po" or "pebble" cakes. The poa t'sui are served as an accompaniment to soup or the salad in the foreign cuisine. The pebble cakes are sweet. They are made from flour, water and sugar, baked hard into flower shapes and sold as "all-day suckers" to children.

Holidays present special desserts. Rice cakes and puddings are featured on the Chinese New Year's Day festival, which comes usually in February. The autumn festival, which comes in September, has a special "moon cake," something like our cooky. It has a filling of sugar, dried fruits and nuts. The cakes are decorated with three traditional figures, the rabbit, tree and house—all characters from an ancient Chinese fable.

Spaghetti Omelet.

For the prima donna food touch, try spaghetti omelet. For this you want a can each of spaghetti, mushrooms, Vienna sausage and four eggs. Mix the egg yolks with the spaghetti and fold into the stiffly beaten egg whites. Season with salt and pepper, pour into a well buttered frying pan and cook as any omelet. When it is cooked and ready to serve, place the heated canned mushrooms and sausages around the omelet which has been carefully folded in half and placed on a platter.

Varied Recipes for Eggs Offer Autumn Novelty

Halves of hard-cooked egg and tender stalks of celery arranged on a platter and served with hot cheese sauce make one of many interesting egg combinations. Prize-winning recipes printed below suggest other possibilities.

Sunday Night Supper Dish With Toast, Tomato and Cheese Wins First Prize; Egg Cutlet and 'Woodchuck' Are Rewarded.

IT HAS been said that there are 100 ways to prepare eggs, and entries in the last week's Favorite Recipe Contest indicate that this is true. The omelet was one of the most popular dishes, but no two recipes were identical. One recipe combined the omelet with chopped goose livers, another served the fluffy omelet with a chopped vegetable sauce and another sprinkled it with powdered sugar and suggested that it be served with ignited rum.

Egg and cheese mixtures were also popular and suggested many smart new ideas. One of these—the "Woodchuck"—is a prize winner.

Delicately flavored Chinese pancakes were a suggestion for the Sunday night supper. These could be served with crisp noodles, steamed rice and hot tea. Deviled eggs in aspic and daintly served egg croquettes were other recipes suggested for Sunday night supper.

The recipe winning first prize is simple to prepare and attractive to serve. It was entered in the contest by Mrs. Gertrude Sibley Phaleu, 1870 Wyoming avenue northwest.

Sunday Night Supper Dish.

Cut bread into large rounds and toast. Fry one slice of tomato and put on toast. On the tomato put one-half or one whole hard boiled egg which has been cut the long way and stuffed as for salad, using ground ham or cooked sausage in the filling. Lay cut side down on the tomato and toast and cover all with this cheese dressing.

Cheese Sauce.

2 tablespoons of butter
2 tablespoons of flour
1 cup of milk
½ cup of grated cheese

Blend the flour and butter. Add to hot milk and heat gently until thickened. Add grated cheese. Stir until melted. Serve at once.

Second prize was awarded Virginia Kringel, 2601 North Franklin road, Arlington Va. The dish is simple to make and is excellent for the meat substitute or for the supper party when you want something different. The bean sprouts give a crispy texture to the delicate flavored cakes. Serve with soy sauce.

Canton Style Egg Foo Yon.

2-3 cup of onion
2 cups of Oriental bean sprouts
1½ teaspoons of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
6 tablespoons of butter

Drain all of the juice from the sprouts (this is very important). Cut onions fine and add a little water. Simmer until water cooks away (about 2 minutes). Beat the eggs slightly and add onions, sprouts and salt and pepper. Stir well together. Melt butter in frying pan. When hot put 3 tablespoons of the mixture into frying pan, making litte cakes, as many as the frying pan will hold. When one side is browned, turn over and brown the other. Garnish with chopped parsley.

The third prize is for an egg cutlet with a distinct nut flavor. It was sent in by Mrs. Louis P. Cook, 27 Woodmont road, Belle Haven, Alexandria.

Egg Cutlet.

8 hard cooked eggs
1 teaspoon of Worchestershire sauce
2 tablespoons of nut meats
2 tablespoons of shortening
4 tablespoons of flour
1 cup of milk
Salt and pepper to taste

Make the thick white sauce by blending flour and shortening and adding to hot milk. Cook until thickened. Season well.

Chop the hard cooked eggs fine. Pour the sauce while hot over the chopped eggs. Add 1 teaspoon of Worchestershire sauce and the chopped nut meats. Allow the mixture to stand until cool. Form into balls. Dip in egg, roll in cracker meal and fry in frying basket.

The fourth prize of $1 was awarded Mrs. Charles A. Rehbein, 3221 Wheeler road, Congress Heights. She writes that "this is simply delicious and scores a grand slam every time for a bridge luncheon."

Woodchuck.

1 pint of milk
5 tablespoons of flour
¼ pound of butter
1 green pepper
1 large can of mushrooms
½ package of Old English cheese
8 hard boiled eggs
½ cup of tomato puree

Make a cream sauce of the butter, flour and milk. When smooth add the cheese and tomato puree. When well-blended and slightly thick add other ingredients and heat through. Serve on noodle nests in patty shells or toast boxes.

The fifth award goes to Miss Leila Bennett, Leonardtown, Md. The melted cheese gives an unusual flavor. Have tomatoes drained and chopped.

Eggs a la Brazil.

2 tablespoons of butter
¼ pound of boiled ham
2 tablespoons of grated cheese
Pinch of sugar
1 cup of tomatoes
5 eggs
1 teaspoon of onion juice
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter in a heavy cooking pan and when hot, add ham and cheese. Cook several minutes. Add tomatoes and seasonings. Then add eggs beaten until light. Stir and cook gently for a few minutes.

Dried Fruits Add To Red Corpuscles

Stuffed Prunes a Healthy Asset to Menu.

All dried fruits provide an additional supply of red corpuscles. They may be used in many interesting ways on the menu. Prunes lend themselves marvelously well to stuffing. The pits of the tender cooked fruit can be extracted with the sharp point of scissors and the cavity filled with a variety of foods of contrasting texture and flavor. A favorite stuffing is crisp apple wedges dipped in mayonnaise and then in crumbled Roquefort cheese or chopped nuts. Cream cheese and pickle relish or grapefruit sections dipped in chopped roasted nuts give piquancy to the natural sweetness of the prunes.

An ordinary loaf of quick or yeast bread is given a festive air by the addition of prunes, pitted and cut into pieces. Cinnamon rolls would lose half their charm if raisins were omitted, so sprinkle them in generously either whole or in sliced form, slicing them with a scissors for convenience. Fruited breads and cakes stay moist and fresh much longer than plain ones.

Instead of dish rags, try using sponges. They absorb water and soap quickly, are easily rinsed free of grease and particles of food, and dry quickly.

FRUIT JUICE PROBLEM
Answered

A REMARKABLE new development in the apple industry now brings to you, at your grocer, a bottle of fresh, raw apple juice uncooked and without preservatives (an exclusive patented filtration process). For years fresh apple juice meant just cider, but today this most delicate of all fruit juices is obtainable with all the exceptional health qualities of fresh apples. Sunblown apple juice is made only of quality grades and selected varieties of apples—under exacting sterile conditions of handling and bottling that bring you the raw, undiluted juice before it has turned to cider. A good source of vitamins (A, B, C and G) and minerals necessary for your resistance to colds and diseases, at a season of the year when you need them most, and beneficial to your general health in many ways. For infants—children — adults — Sunblown apple juice fulfills the fruit juice requirements of the entire household economically and conveniently. A chilled bottle of Sunblown natural apple juice in the ice box at all times (warm for the baby) solves the problem. The taste will please you—and the "lift" amaze you.

Dr. Smith Asks Child Reform Inquiry Here

Former Girls' School Head Blames Humane Policy for Removal.

'a dump' for all the unwanted juvenile females of the District and the effort of the writer to inaugurate a new policy, eliminating from the school the definitely feeble-minded the psychopathic, the unmarried mother and her baby, was not considered of importance by the board. So for months we have attempted to conduct a school, the 'pupils' of which were white and colored, feeble-minded and normal, sane and psychopathic, unmarried mothers and babies, well and diseased.

Perversion a Problem.

"If our housing facilities and personnel had permitted segregation the problem might have been solved, but because of the renovation program girls have had to be shifted around and all kinds mixed up together.

"In any group there are apt to be problems of perversion. * * * These comparatively few girls have been a demoralizing element in the group and have added to the disorder by their fights. This situation has not simply been passed up as of no importance. As a physician I have spent hours frankly talking to individual girls about the unwisdom of this behavior and have apparently gotten results with them.

"The Board of Public Welfare has never discussed this problem with me, and if they are so innocent as not to recognize it as a common problem they certainly are unaware of the ABC's of institutions.

"Small units, segregation, a busy program of work and play, with lenty of outdoor recreation, plus insight which can only come by understanding, are the only remedies—repression, punishment, accusation, only exaggerate these abormal manifestations.

"The public should realize the tremendous difficulties of any program of 'correction' of children who have been disadvantaged from childhood. It is no easy job. It requires tireless devotion, and that consecration to a cause which is rarely found and which characterized very few of the employes with whom I was expected to work.

Given No Chance to Talk.

"If there has been an 'investigation,' as has been rumored, the former superintendent has not been included. She is only too eager to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

Dr. Smith charged she was never given a chance to present her problems to the board and it refused to take her into confidence as it did other institutional officials. To this the board replied, "she has frequently met with members of the board and several times with the board welfare committee."

Riots, she said, were nothing new at the training school and she received no support in attempting to correct conditions. "We are not satisfied there could be any improvement under her administration," the board answered.

She said only four of the nine members of the board ever visited the training school, and then briefly, and no inspection trips were made. "The Board of Public Welfare is divided into committees," was its reply. "There is no presumption that all members of the board shall visit every institution in the District. Each committee has its own job."

She was not given a fair chance, Dr. Smith charged, to demonstrate her policies and methods of disciplining girls at the institution. "She has been there since February 10, 1936," said the board.

WPA workmen at the institution are demoralizing the girls, she said. "She asked for the construction project," answered the board.

Buildings urged by Dr. Smith are now under way with a fund of $100,000 appropriated by Congress for the purpose.

Conditions Barbaric.

Shortly after her appointment in February, 1936, Dr. Smith succeeded in securing a personal visit to the school by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Describing conditions at the institution as "intolerable," Mrs. Roosevelt later invited the inmates to tea at the White House. Senators King, of Utah, and Copeland, of New York, also visited the school and found conditions "barbaric."

In a subsequent campaign to secure building funds, Dr. Smith was allotted $100,000 for construction work. New buildings are now going up with WPA labor.

Dr. Smith confirmed reports she had been ousted from similar positions in Texas and Maryland. In Gainesville, Tex., she said, she was removed as training school superintendent because of "a row with the Ku Klux Klan."

At the Montrose School, in nearby Maryland, Dr. Smith declared, she was dismissed "for political reasons." She held the former position ten years and the latter from 1933 until her appointment here.

Ford Will Reopen Plant If Labor Trouble Ends

Detroit, Oct. 29 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. announced tonight that it would reopen its assembly plant at Kansas City "as soon as it receives assurances from officials that men who want to work can do so without interference."

The statement was issued after a conference between Henry Ford, Harry Bennett, Ford personnel chief, and H. F. McElroy, city manager of Kansas City. Ford officials announced recently they were closing the plant permanently because of labor disturbances.

Byrd, Gangster, Retaken by Police

Cleveland, Oct. 30 (AP).—Cleveland police announced tonight they had captured Frank Bird, nationally hunted gangster, and his wife. Bird was captured without a shot being fired at the home of his wife's parents. Federal agents had surrounded the house. Another man, believed to be Bird's brother, Charles, escaped.

The Bird brothers have been at the head of the Government's wanted list since their sensational break two weeks ago from the Cleveland Jail.

Brazilians End 9-Year Motor Trip to Washington

Underwood & Underwood.

Nine years ago three Brazilian highway engineers set out in two Model T Fords to make the first trip over the projected Pan-American highway from Rio de Janeiro. They covered 16,500 miles in 15 countries over a route they are explaining here to Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director of the Pan American Union. Left to right are Francisco Lopez de la Cruz, Mario Fava, S. W. White, interpreter; Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; Dr. Rowe, and Leonidas Borges de Oliveira, commanding the expedition. The pathfinders had to cut their own roads for 2,276 miles. They stuffed old casings with grass and leaves when new tires were unavailable. Occasionally they butchered hogs to get lubricants for the machines. Thirty-three previous expeditions failed to accomplish their trek.

Crest of Flood To Reach Here Today; 1 Dies

Potomac Due to Overflow Lowlands; High Won't Equal Last Year's.

Leaving a trail of death and destruction, the crest of the flooded Potomac River swept down on Washington last night.

In the Cumberland Valley at least one man was dead and property damage in the city of Cumberland, Md., was placed above $50,000. Weather Bureau officials here predicted the water would reach 10 feet on the Wisconsin avenue gauge early this morning and, although the river would overflow its banks in District lowlands, the high water "will be nothing like last year's flood."

On Minnie's Island, in the Potomac, opposite Glen Echo, a man, his wife and their 7-year-old son were marooned by rising water and treacherous currents last night.

Any attempt to reach them last night was forestalled by rapids between the island and the river bank.

In Cumberland, Md., Gilbert Hissey, 41-year-old trackman for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was killed beneath the wheels of a train. He was assigned to special flood duty, warning pedestrians and trainmen of a rock slide started by the flood waters.

Forty miles downstream from Cumberland, the racing waters forced river-front residents of Hancock to abandon their homes.

Baltimore & Ohio trains were routed over tracks of the Western Maryland system when water covered the right-of-way at Patterson and Sleepy Creek, Md.

Early today the water is expected to reach 17 feet at Sycamore Island just above the District.

As the flood crest passed Harpers Ferry, W. Va., a temporary bridge was wiped out, but a new span under construction was opened to care for traffic. Other than this, authorities reported, there was little damage.

The water at Williamsport, Md., rose to 29 feet early yesterday afternoon, but quickly receded with a minimum of damage.

Prospect of damage along the Washington water front was lessened by a forecast of fair weather today. The high-water crest, Weather Bureau officials said, is slowly losing its force.

Reports from up-stream points near Washington brought few fears last night. Snake Island, near Glen Echo, was partially covered by nightfall. Little Falls River was level with its banks. Several cottages along the water front near Cabin John were submerged to first-floor windows.

Residents of Brookmont, Md., were preparing to move Mrs. Robert McNeic and her three children from their river-edge home. Late last night the water had reached the McNeic front porch.

Contract

Leads From Tenaces

It is a natural and commendable practice to protect tenace positions as much as possible—to lead away from an Ace-Queen or King-Jack does not promote a comfortable feeling. Nevertheless, this very type lead is often required by the exigencies of a situation. Today's hand is an example.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 8 3 ♡ 8 2 ◇ J 6 3 ♣ A K Q 7 4 3
♠ K Q J 5 4 ♡ Q 5 ◇ A Q 2 ♣ 9 8 2	West / North / East / South	♠ 9 6 2 ♡ 9 6 ◇ K 10 8 4 ♣ J 10 6 5
	♠ A 10 7 ♡ A K J 10 7 4 3 ◇ 9 7 5 ♣ —

The bidding.

South	West	North	East
3 ♡	3 ♠	4 ♣	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West made his normal opening—the spade King. East played the deuce, and declarer, unhesitatingly, followed with the seven. On the half-baked analysis that the one way to save game was to find East with the spade Ace, so that he might come through the diamond King, which West arbitrarily "placed" in declarer's hand, West continued with a spade. Declarer gobbled up this trick, and ruffed his third spade in dummy, then gaily discarded three losing diamonds on the Ace, King, Queen of clubs.

Apparently West, in continuing with a spade lead, must have thought his partner an idiot. Had East held the spade Ace it is inconceivable that he would have failed to overtake and return a diamond to dummy's weakness. Certainly he would have done this rather than play the discouraging deuce on West's King. Faced with a solid club suit, West easily should have seen that the only hope of defeating the contract was to cash diamond tricks before surrendering the lead. As between placing East with a card which he had said in clearest terms that he did not hold and leading away from a tenace, surely West's choice was not difficult.

Representative Hill Of Oklahoma Dies

Oklahoma City, Oct. 29 (AP).—R. P. Hill, of Oklahoma City, Democratic Congressman from the Fifth Oklahoma District, died in a hospital today after suffering a heart attack.

Hill, one of the few men ever to represent two states in Congress, first was elected from the Illinois Twenty-fifth District in 1912. He returned to Congress in the last session, defeating a crowded field. He was 61 years old and a member of the House Judiciary Committee.

T. A. Lusby Dies; D.C. Policeman For Forty Years

Second Oldest Man on Force Was Horseman; Solved Brutal Murder.

Thomas A. (Pop) Lusby, 68, and the second oldest policeman on the Metropolitan force, died in George Washington University Hospital yesterday of a heart ailment.

Lusby, who served 40 years as a private in the Fifth and Eleventh precincts, was ordered on sick leave October 12 after a visit to the police doctors. Until that time he was in the best of health, working every day.

"Pop," as he was known to most policemen, joined the force in October, 1897. After seven years foot patrol duty he was mounted on a horse to patrol the outlying sections of the Fifth Precinct, which, at that time, was mostly pastures.

He rode a horse until 1929, when the District did away with all mounts in favor of scout cars. Due to his age, his superiors gave Lusby the day job of checking license applications in the Eleventh Precinct, a position he held at the time of his death.

Lusby was commended many times for his police work, particularly in robbery cases. He one time solved a brutal murder in the Southeast and arrested the slayer.

He lived at 4017 U street southeast and is survived by a daughter, Genevieve Lusby, and two sons, Charles E. and William A.

U.S. Jew Arrested, Released by Nazis, Was Envoy of Race

Paris, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Isidor Gennett, Jewish news dealer from New York City who last week placed a wreath on the tomb of Germany's unknown soldier in Berlin and was promptly escorted to police headquarters, identified himself tonight as the self-appointed envoy of "peace-loving Jews throughout the world."

Gennett, an American Legionnaire, explained that when he applied to Nazi authorities for permission to place the wreath on the tomb as a gesture of Jewish friendship toward the German people, he identified himself as a Jew.

"But that didn't seem to make any difference then, and they gave me every courtesy—even an honor guard."

After the ceremony he was detained and questioned at police headquarters for three hours, he said, then was released with the explanation that "there has been a mistake."

'Vintage' Autos Open Exhibit Of Latest Cars

Old-Timers to Chug Over Streets Today as 18th Show Starts.

To the tune of "Daisy, Daisy" and other songs of the era, 21 horseless carriages of ancient vintage will chug through Washington this morning to mark the opening of the eighteenth annual automobile show at 1242 Twenty-fourth street northwest.

Starting at Constitution avenue and Sixth street "rain or shine" at 10 o'clock, the procession is scheduled to move under its own power to Seventeenth street, along Pennsylvania avenue to Twenty-fourth street and thence to the exhibition building.

The survivors of the ordeal will be appraised by a battery of distinguished judges, including Charles E. Duryea, 76-year-old "father of the automobile;" Frank Taylor, director of the engineering division of the Smithsonian Institution; Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, and John A. Hunter, named the safest driver in Washington in 1936. Starter of cavalcade will be Horace C. Chandlee, said to be the first owner of an automobile in the District, 1902.

1900 Benz Entered.

A 1900 Benz entered in the cavalcade belongs to George A. Waterman, jr., of Rhode Island, who is the owner of 77 antique cars. Proud possessors of a 1908 "Hupp" from Philadelphia are Frank Abramson and Theodore Fiala, president and secretary, respectively, of the Antique Automobile Association of America. A 1902 Cadillac from Bladensburg is said to date from the first year of production.

Some of the drivers will be dressed in goggles, dusters and other articles of apparel that every well-dressed motorist wore 30 years ago.

Russell E. Singer, general manager of the American Automobile Association, which is sponsoring the cavalcade, will award prizes totaling $200 based on performance, mechanical condition, age, attire of driver and distance traveled under the car's own power to Washington.

All Firms But One Exhibit.

Every American automobile manufacturer but Ford will have an exhibit in the auto show. Some appliance and oil companies also have taken space, it was said yesterday.

The show, held under the auspices of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, is occupying considerably more space this year than last, but the number of exhibits is approximately the same.

Although the show's decorative motif goes back several thousand years to the Egyptian, the cars themselves give no trace of retrogression. Most 1938 vehicles continue to be moderately streamlined with more chromium decoration than before. Generally speaking there are no radical changes.

Flooded Potomac River Becomes Raging Torrent

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

COPYRIGHT 1937 FOR THE WASHINGTON POST.

Here's a tip which may save you many dollars next time you want to bet on an election.

The straw vote experts of the American Institute of Public Opinion, who are not above backing their judgment with an occasional wager of a few thousand dollars, let me in on the secret.

* * * *

If a good poll shows Candidate A topping Candidate B by 3 to 2, then it isn't merely a 3 to 2 bet, or a 2 to 1 bet, or even a 5 to 1 bet, that A will win over B.—

It's a 50 to 1 bet the ratio won't change in the election, and that A will win from B.

* * * *

Or, to be more specific: With the current betting odds between 3 and 5 to 1 in New York that LaGuardia will win, and 8 to 5 that Public Defender No. 2, Mr. Dewey, will win, the mathematical odds, based on the polls and the laws of chance, actually are around 50 to 1 that LaGuardia and Dewey will win.

These are his figures, not mine . . . And even on expert advice you might well hesitate to risk $5,000 to win $100.

"—the President seeks advice"

Despite the inclement weather and the constant precipitation of metal and blood around Shanghai, some of the tourist bureaux keep advertising tours to Asia, with Shanghai one of the big stops . . . Better pack a steel helmet.

* * * *

Capital Curios: When in a gay mood on a party, Senator Byrd, of Virginia, is apt to ask the orchestra to play "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia"—but musicians say his ear for music is so sporadic that usually he doesn't recognize it when it's played.

* * * *

Like many a Washingtonian, I scooted out to Monticello, the hilltop home of Thomas Jefferson, in search of inspiration and rebirth—as every Member of Congress should, every session.

* * * *

But what seems cling in my mind most of all is President Jefferson's set of six straight-edge razors—one each for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

* * * *

Did he shave on Thursday, or didn't he? The question rattles in my mind, and I suggest the State Department cable immediately to Ambassador Claude Bowers, the foremost Jeffersonian of our day.

* * * *

When Senators out on a frolic learn that the orchestra is broadcasting to Republic—especially to the Dixie stations—it often takes force to prevent them from barging up to the microphone to make a speech.

* * * *

And once a tactless orchestra leader dedicated to a Congressman and the pretty young thing he happened to be with—no relative of his, nor his wife's—that provocative ditty entitled "I'm in the Mood for Love." Later he made a semipublic apology.

"—a ready-made national hookup"

* * * *

What's worrying the nervous patriots in Washington more than anything else is that President Roosevelt is becoming less and less a good listener . . . He summons some expert or other for consultation and advice, and then delivers to him a half-hour lecture on The More Abundant Life, by which time Secretary McIntyre sticks his head in and says it's time for the next expert to come in and listen . . . We who admire Mr. Roosevelt so lavishly must remind him that no one has a monopoly on omniscience.

* * * *

Diplomatic Note: Most of the souvenirs offered to tourists in Washington—miniature Washington Monuments, inkwells and pin trays shaped like the Capital, and such valuable objets d'art and travel mementos—are made in Japan by the diligent little men who are making things so tough for tourists in China.

Ghost Parade Is Halloween Feature Here

Betty Lewis Will Lead Shrieking Celebrants to Judges' Stands.

Parties, Dances, Private Observances for All-hallows' Eve.

The round of parties and merry-making that takes place annually in celebration of the feast of ghosts, goblins and witches will get under way in earnest tonight as Washington's Halloween parade swings up Constitution avenue at 7:30.

Headed by Betty Virginia Lewis, 18-year-old Temple School student, the celebrants will march along Constitution avenue from Fourth street to Seventeenth street. The court of honor will be set up on the south side of the Avenue between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets, just opposite the reviewing stands full of judges and distinguished guests.

In the group with Miss Lewis will be the king of the parade, Maurice Jarvis, and Denis Connell, court jester. David Cole and Roy Burton will herald the approach of the queen. Jack Exline and Andrew Jackson will be pages.

Police, Scouts to Keep Order.

The District National Guard will supervise formation of parade units. Metropolitan and park police and Boy Scouts will assist in keeping order. Chairman of the parade committee is Col. John W. Oehmann.

Meanwhile, all over the city, in private homes and at hotels and restaurants, children and adults will observe the traditions of All Hallow's Eve. They will bob for apples in old washtubs and sit around tipping the convivial cider bowl.

Observance of the ghostly holiday commenced last night with a large costume party at Langdon Field given under the sponsorship of the Brookland-Woodridge Businessmen's Association.

More than 50 children will be entertained at a combined Halloween and birthday party this afternoon at the Raleigh, when Beverley Samakow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Samakow, of 1021 Quebec place northwest, celebrates her eighth birthday.

Hotels Plan Dances.

District hotels are planning gala affairs tonight. Among large functions scheduled, the New York State Society will hold its Halloween dance at the Shoreham, and Sigma Epsilon is to give its annual Halloween party at the Wardman Park. Washington night clubs will celebrate tonight, but many of those in Virginia will observe the holiday on Monday.

In the buff and blue room, George Washington University's drinkless night club, the visiting Tulsa team was honored in a post-game party lats night.

Along the streets tonight children will leap suddenly from behind trees and bushes, carrying jack o'lanterns, wearing hideous masks and emitting ear-splitting howls.

In anticipation of heavy crowds this evening, the Capital Transit Co. will run extra cars on all trolley lines serving the downtown area. Extra buses will be provided, if necessary, company officials said.

Christmas Seal Committee Picked

Aroused by the recent statistical survey of the death rate from tuberculosis in the United States, which gave the District the highest rate, the board of directors of the local Tuberculosis Association yesterday discussed increased efforts to combat the disease in Washington.

A committee to assist in sale of the penny Christmas Seals was announced by Dr. James G. Townsend, president of the association, as follows:

Ridley Goldsborough Hunt, chairman; Mrs. James C. Townsend, vice chairman; Mrs. W. Frank Persons, vice chairman; Francis G. Addison, jr., Dr. Harry S. Bernton, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Charles T. Clagett, Walter B. Clarkson, Edward F. Colladay, Robert J. Cottrell, James A. Councilor, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, Joshua Evans, jr., Robert V. Fleming, Isaac Gans, Edwin C. Graham, Frank R. Jelleff, Mark Lansburgh, Thomas Lodge, jr., Harold H. Marsh, Edgar Morris, Lanier P. McLachlen, Claude W. Owen, George W. Offutt, Walter S. Pratt, jr., John Saul, Willard C. Smith, William A. Van Duser and William W. Wheeler.

Among directors at the meeting were Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, first vice president; Walter S. Pratt, jr., Dr. J. W. Peabody, Miss Gertrude Bowling, Mrs. Andrew Stewart, Dr. Joseph A. Murphy, Risley G. Hunt and Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director.

Capital Girl Scouts To Attend Service In Cathedral Choir

Several hundred Girl Scouts will be present at the choral evensong service in the great choir of the Cathedral tomorrow at 4 o'clock, when Canon Anson Phelps Stokes will deliver the sermon. This youthful pilgrimage will be under the direction of Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, new president of the National Girl Scouts.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of the Cathedral, will deliver the sermon at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. Music for both the 11 a. m. and 4 p. m. services will be furnished by the Cathedral Choir. Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7:30 a. m. in Bethlehem Chapel.

District Joins World in Preparing for Halloween Fete

Post Staff Photos.

Costumes and color took the stage hereabouts yesterday in preparation for tonight's celebration of Halloween with its traditional cats and witches. At left is Lila Woodward, of 1008 Sixteenth street northwest in a costume of yesterday. At the top are Clara Newman, of 1704 A street southeast, and John Dortzbach, of Arlington, with Dortzbach simulating an oversized black cat. In the circle are Dortzbach and Zena Lambert, of 1753 Columbia road, and at the bottom Miss Lambert and Dortzbach are in conference with a rather grisly looking witch who has nothing to say because she's a dummy.

Be quiet, clattering mechanical age, with your wars and rumors of wars, for the masquerade is with us—at least for tonight!

Old Man Mars may be polishing up his armor, but not in Washington's costume shops, where Puck and Fancy saunter arm-in-arm over an avenue of cobwebs and semi-fulfilled dreams.

The costume business this Halloween is bigger and better than it has been in years say costumers who are delighted with the turn public imagination has taken.

There will be scores of Pierrots and Pierrettes at parties tonight, and even here and there on the streets. Gypsies will abound. Colonial belles and ladies of the Civil War period will flick parasols in the saucy autumn wind, and wink back at glowing pumpkins' eyes. There will be a preponderance of medieval characters, right out of the pages of your costumers' book. Elves and sprites will be plentiful.

But as for Mars, he doesn't seem to rate. Very few persons will jaunt about in armor and plumes.

"People want escape from the workday, crazy world, I think," opined Ira D. Baker, in his costume shop, in the 1200 block of Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

"Folks forget in bars sometimes," explained Baker.

"But it is even better for them to forget here. The play, as Shakespeare said so long ago, is really the thing."

Men come and go, as seasons and years, but the costume business changes little.

"Make me a Gypsy just for the night," sighed pretty Zeva Lampert, 21, of 1753 Columbia road, who, as a hat-check girl, is pretty tired of modernity and hum-drum staying in one place.

John Dortz, of 1900 Nelson avenue, Arlington, wanted to be a Gypsy, too.

Whether Miss Lila Woodward, of 1008 Sixteenth street northwest, wishes to emerge as a perfectly turned out maiden of George Washington's day, or someone else wants to be a cat or a lion, is immaterial, indeed!

In a moment the transformation is achieved, and ghosts chuckle from behind the costume shop cupboards.

It costs $3 to be Abraham Lincoln, and $5 to be George Washingtonton. To be Pierrot or Pierrette costs $3. If you want to surprise your friends and appear as an elephant, the tax is $4. Lions are a bit higher. Spanish dancers are $3.50, and Japanese princesses $3. As for Napoleon, fairly popular with small men who have inferiority complexes and want to forget them for the night, the charge is $5. It might go on forever. You can be your favorite character for the price.

Business Tax Deadline Put Off to Nov. 30

Crowds Jam Collection Office to Pay Realty and Property Levies.

16,000 File Returns for Privilege Licenses; $173,510 Received.

As hundreds of late taxpayers crowded the office of Tax Collector Chatham M. Towers yesterday in a last-minute rush to settle real estate and personal property taxes before the deadline of noon today, Business Privilege Tax Administrator Allen F. Brooke announced the deadline for payment of his classifications of taxes had been extended to November 30 by the Commissioners.

In the real estate and personal property classification, Towers said money orders and checks mailed and postmarked not later than midnight tonight would be accepted without added penalty.

Adding to the business privilege tax muddle, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal stated classifications of the excise tax were questions of fact and not law, and should be answered by officials. He asserted exise taxes intended for manufacturers and not for consumers were not deductible from gross receipts.

In dealing with the business privilege tax, Brooke estimated about 16,000 returns had been received. These were 2,000 more than expected.

Business privilege licenses, which are required of all business and professional people in the District, have netted $173,510, Tax Collector Towers reported.

The District received $136,968.04 from the Capital Transit Co. yesterday for bus mileage and real estate taxes. In the course of the year the taxes will run close to $700,000, J. E. Heberle, vice president and comptroller of Capital Transit, stated.

About two-thirds of the amount paid yesterday, $93,161.18, was for the bus operations tax, and $43,806.86 covered real estate taxes for the first half of the year ending June 30, 1938. In addition, the transit company will pay an estimated amount of $296,884.09 next March, a 4 per cent tax on gross revenue.

The District unemployment tax, payable monthly, will amount to $120,775.18 for the year, it is estimated.

Flower Exhibit Honor Awarded To Mrs. Ruhoff

She Takes Honors in 13 Classes at Takoma Horticultural Show.

Mrs. Theodore Ruhoff, of 401 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., won the sweepstakes at the twelfth annual chrysanthemum show of the Takoma Horticultural Club, which closed last night at the Takoma Branch of the Public Library, Fifth and Cedar streets northwest.

First American Settlers Brought High Culture, Dr. Hrdlicka Says

Asiatic Migrants Lost Refinements in Cruel Alaskan Conditions, He Believes; Lecture Describes Difficulties of Research in North.

Archeologists of the future will have a hard time figuring out Alaska, according to Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, of the U. S. National Museum. The eminent anthropologist was the speaker at last night's annual banquet of the Eastern States Archeological Federation at the Willard Hotel.

Geological forces, with no respect for the dead, treat human bones like playthings and strew them all over the peninsula. The Yukon River, for instance, will eat away an entire village, churn up the bones buried there centuries before, mix them with relics of earlier and later periods and carry them down its course. Gradually the silt and bones will accumulate and form an island, miles away from the original village. Ultimately the island becomes joined to the mainland and the bones end their involuntary migration, awaiting the arrival of bewildered excavators.

Alaska has given Dr. Hrdlicka and his associates plenty of trouble already. He has been digging up there every year since 1926, believing that he will find traces of the immigrants from northeastern Asia who became the original inhabitants of America.

"The ice there is so hard that when we hammered at it, the axe was damaged rather than the ice," he added.

Despite these obstacles, the exportant discoveries. Dr. Hrdlicka has blasted the old theory that the Asiatic immigrants were uncivilized. His finds include fine cloth of elaborate design and exquisitely engraved stone lamps, which will be exhibited at the National Museum next week.

The ancient remains give evidence of a far greater degree of culture than more recent deposits, indicating that the full-fledged civilization brought from Asia became simplified by the "cruel conditions" of Alaska. He thought this happened about 2,000 years ago.

The federation, which consists of archeological societies in nine states, will continue their meetings today at the Unitd States National Museum. Speakers will include Dr. M. W. Stirling, chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology; Dr. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., of the same bureau; Dr. Neil M. Judd, curator of archeology, United States National Museum, and Dr. Waldo R. Wedel, assistant curator of archeology.

About 30 delegates are attending the sessions. States represented are Rhode Island, Conecticut, New York, New Jersey, Deleware, Maryland, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Vermont.

Man Slashes Wife, Her Mother, Self

A Washington carpenter called on his estranged wife at her mother's home yesterday, allegedly slashed both women with a knife and then cut his own throat.

In serious condition, all three were taken to Emergency Hospital. The man, Martin Ainsworth, 32, 927 Twentieth street northwest, later was removed to Gallinger Hospital.

The injured women are Mrs. Rosabella Ainsworth, 19, mother of a year-old boy, and Mrs. Rachael Beans, the young wife's mother.

The alleged slashing occurred in the kitchen of Mrs. Bean's apartment, 908 Twentieth street.

Police say Ainsworth slashed at Mrs. Beans' face, inflicting a gash that ran from her lower cheek to her scalp.

Then turning on his wife, he slashed her throat and stabbed her several times, according to police.

Commission Denies Appointment of Nonresidents to Local Posts.

Denial that residents of various States who make a higher rating in examinations are given preference over District residents in appointments in the District government was contained in a statement issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission.

The commission pointed out that the present regulations provide that preference in certification for filling local offices in the District government must be given to local residents.

"It is further true," continued the statement, "that if there are no local or nearby eligibles on the register, appointments are then authorized by the Civil Service Commission of local persons outside the register, which assures that local appointments may still be made."

In appointments to Federal departmental positions, however, the quota, based on population, applies to the District as well as the various States, and entitles Washington residents to approximately 1 post in 250.

The commission concluded that "any arguments for a special civil service system for the local municipal government, based on the allegation that Washington residents would thereby have a better opportunity to get positions in the District of Columbia departments, is based on a lack of familiarity with current regulations."

5 Bandits Take $220 in Three Liquor Stores

Colored Gang, Believed From Maryland, Strikes in 15 Minutes.

Five colored bandits robbed three liquor stores within 15 minutes in the Second Precinct last night, escaping with loot totaling $220.

The procedure in each case was the same. Four of the men would enter the store and announce to the proprietor, "This is a hold-up. Give us your money." The fifth waited outside in a car with Maryland license plates.

The victims of last night's robberies were Abraham Schulman, 1900 block of Fourteenth street northwest, $120; Nicholas Captan, 101 L street northwest, $50, and Solomon Cohen, 1225 Fifth street northwest, $50.

Frank Toper, of 807 Eighth street northwest, a cab driver, was cut about the face and hands last night when he hesitated to obey the command of two Negro passengers to hand over all his money. After picking up the two men in the 700 block K street northwest, Toper was ordered to drive to Second and T streets where his passengers robbed him of $5.

Auto Driver Held In Death of Kelly

Edward D. Williams, 39, of 1360 North Carolina avenue northeast, an employe of the District government, was held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death of Charles E. (Finney) Kelly, 42, 435 Fifteenth street northeast, a former policeman.

Kelly was killed instantly Tuesday when an automobile driven by Williams struck a telephone pole at Eighteenth street and Good Hope road southeast, broke it off and careened into the corner of a house.

U.S. Is Developing 'Suicide' Raiders As Torpedo Fleet

The United States Navy is preparing to follow the lead of foreign fleets in developing small, lightning-fast "suicide" raiders and scouting craft.

Declining to amplify a disclosure by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison that two experimental boats, designed to attain a speed of 50 miles an hour, are contemplated, naval officials said yesterday details remain to be worked out.

The speedboat raiders, faster than any other surface craft, won the "suicide" sobriquet when used by the British in the World War. The American craft will be faster than any similar boats developed by Great Britain, Italy or Germany, which have been experimenting with them for more than 20 years.

Their swiftness, Edison said, will enable them to dash within a few hundred feet of the side of a battleship, discharge torpedoes and dart quickly out of range of hostile guns. Speed and ability to maneuver quickly are their sole defense.

Wayne C. Taylor's Son in Auto Crash

Hobart Chatfield Taylor, of 5001 Tilden street northwest, son of Wayne C. Taylor, fiscal Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, was one of three Yale students reported badly hurt in an automobile crash at West Haven, Conn., yesterday.

Others hurt in the accident are: Charles Baxter, 19, of South Euclid, Ohio, and John Carhart, 19, of Oakvale, Long Island. Hospital authorities said Baxter suffered a fractured skull and scalp lacerations; Carhart, a possible skull fracture and scalp lacerations, and Chatfield-Taylor a brain concussion and facial lacerations.

Young Taylor entered Yale University this year following graduation from St. Mark's School at Southboro, Mass. The family home is at Lake Forest, Ill.

TULSA BEATS COLONIALS, 14 TO 13, IN SEE-SAW DUEL

Last-Minute Touchdown Enables Central to Tie Western Eleven, 7-7

ARMSTRONG KAYOS PETEY SARRON IN 6TH ROUND

Oilers Rally, Take Lead in Last Half

G. W. Gets Away to Lead but Is Overcome by Invaders in Night Battle Here; 10,000 Watch Thrilling Contest at Griffith Stadium.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Washington University's amazingly improved gridmen encountered a five-letter word meaning excitement last night at Griffith Stadium and after 60 minutes of furious and wide open football emerged from the combat with an ill-deserved 14-13 defeat.

But the Colonials didn't lose any prestige in the eyes of the 15,000 fans who saw 'hem vanquished by Tulsa's Golden Hurricane. If anything they gained fresh laurels from the ashes of defeat, for it was a left-hand break that sent the Colonials hurtling into defeat.

But give the Westerners their due, for twice they came from behind to match their host's scoring thrusts and eventually win by the slim but sufficient margin of one well directed placement kick.

It was midway in the final period with George Washington boasting a 13-to-7 advantage that fortune intervened in Tulsa's cause. Tulsa had worked the ball from its own 9-yard line to the Colonials' 24, where G. W. braced and held. "Tossin' Tommy" Thompson dropped back and aimed a pass at the receding figure of Morris White.

MacClune Scores.

At the goal line, White, the ball, Bruce Mahan and Bomb Nowaskey, the latter pair defending the G. W. territory, met. White reached for the leather, but it fell into the outstretched mitts of MacClune, who had come up from behind, and he staggered 3 yards into the end zone for the touchdown. Tommy Johnson added the extra point with a perfect placement, and the game, from a scoring angle, was over.

Nowasky figured in Tulsa's initial touchdown, futilely attempting to bat down Thompson's pass to Buddy Rogers, who took the ball over his shoulder in the end zone on a dead run. This Thompson, incidentally, is another Sammy Baugh and just as good. He could have dotted an "i" at 20 paces. This pass culminated a short march of 28-yards after Kaufman had gotten off a 50-yard punt that, unfortunately, soared outside on his own 28-yard line.

But George Washington, with Pete Yurwitz and Lloyd Berry playing bang-up ball at end, literally; Vic Sampson and Jay Turner leading the attack, and the entire team displaying about 500 per cent improvement over last week's game, drew first blood. And the way the Colonials went after the Hurricane made Tulsa supporters squirm a bit uneasily in their seats.

G. W. Punt Blocked.

Placed at a disadvantage at the very outset of the game when the left side of Tulsa's line broke through and blocked Sampson's punt and Farmer recovered for the Oilers on G. W.'s 18-yard line, the downtown school had to repulse an alien threat before stirring up one of its own. Turner presented his mates with their first opportunity by gathering in White's pass on Tulsa's 47-yard line.

Nowasky and Turner smashed through the line to a first down on Tulsa's 32-yard line before Sampson completed three short, swift passes to Berry and Yurwitz. The Meehan Happy Again at Manhattan.

By Shirley Povich.

Little Chick Meehan, who chucked his job as head coach at New York University because he said he was tired of big-time football, is currently in town with the Manhattan College team that meets Georgetown this afternoon. He's happy with his young men of Manhattan. He's out from under the high-pressure staff.

POVICH

He is the owner of a prosperous contracting business in New York that probably wasn't injured any by the fame he achieved as the N. Y. U. coach. New York University, B. F. (before Meehan) was something of a push-over until little Chick was drafted from Syracuse to put the Violets on the football map. Under his tutelage they became the Violent Violets, a power in Eastern football.

* * * *

He built a team around Ken Strong that was even headed for a national championship until it bumped into a surprising 7-to-2 defeat by Georgetown when Ken Provincial galloped 90 yards through the mud with a fumble. But it was Meehan's shows that made Manhattan N. Y. U. conscious. He outfitted his Violet teams in the gaudiest uniforms designable, introduced the military goose-step shift, padded the student band with pros, drew huge crowds to the games, took on suicide schedules and made N. Y. U. an opponent to be reckoned with.

* * * *

But, six years ago, as I was saying, he suddenly threw up his job. The strain of big-time football was too much, he said. Besides, he had his contracting business to think of. At Manhattan he could get closer to the boys, rid himself of the worries of riding for a fall.

* * * *

Soon, Meehan-manufactured teams began to win ball games for Manhattan. The little coach wasn't doing his new employers any harm. When he took up the job in 1932, Manhattan had 600 students, plenty of dormitory beds. Today, it has more than 1,200 attending classes and the good fathers have been forced to limit the incoming freshmen.

* * * *

As Manhattan began to win games, the athletic folks began to feel a new importance. Manhattan's schedules became tougher until this year Meehan is saddled with a list of games that includes Texas A. & M., Michigan State, Villanova, Kentucky, Georgetown, Detroit, North Carolina and Tulane. Willy-nilly, it seems that

Stapleton Stops Tulsa Back for One-Yard Gain

A hard tackle by Stapleton, of George Washington, stopped Farmer, Tulsa ball carrier, holding him to a small advance on a driving off-tackle play early in their annual clash last night at Griffith Stadium. The Oilers finally triumphed by a margin of one point.

Central Ties Western, 7-7, In Late Drive

By Jack Munhall.

A touchdown and a 20-yard drop kick for extra point in the final minutes of play enabled Central High's eleven to gain a startling 7-7 tie with Western yesterday in an interhigh football series game played in the Central Stadium before 2,000 fans.

It was a startling turn of events because as late as the final three minutes of that fourth quarter Western was clutching to a huge 7-0 lead gained on a third-period score. But that was before Wilbur Barr, a stubby figure in blue, planted his sizable brogan on the sod and sent a perfect boot skimming through the bars.

That was also before Center Charley Jones smashed past Westerns' line to block Morris Snead's kick from the 7-yard stripe and Phil Chernikoff, a guard, recovered in the end zone for the tying touchdown.

80-Yard March.

Until those final minutes Western had things pretty much its own way with Quarterback Snead and Dickie Lynham engineering a great 80-yard march to goal in the third period. Taking Goldsworthy's punt on his 10, Snead returned the ball to the Western 20 and the Georgetowners moved swiftly down the field without a halt.

First it was Snead cracking the tackles for 5, 10 and even more yards. And then it was Lynham whipping short, accurate passes to lanky Lenny Stanton or O'Hanlon, a fine pair of ends. And when Western reached the Central 14, Lynham climaxed the drive in fitting fashion, shooting a 19-yard pass to Stanton, who caught the ball on the dead run over the goal line.

Lynham then added the point to give Western its 7-0 lead.

And that margin appeared increasingly ample for, although Central threatened on numerous occasions, a hard-charging Western wall arose to stem each danger.

Western Outplayed.

Through the first half and for the better part of the third quarter Central outplayed the visitors, rolling up four first downs to two. Three times it was deep in Western territory due to poor handling of punts by Snead who marred an otherwise brilliant exhibition by carelessly grabbing and then fumbling kicks which bounded at his feet.

Shannon Cramer, brother to Hugh, and Harvey Doughty, defensive halfback played great defensive games for Central while Snead, Stanton and Hal Price were outstanding for Western.

Golden Bears Favored Over U. C. L. A. Today

Pitt and Alabama Also Given Edge Over Foes Today and Continue Unbeaten March.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 29.—Notwithstanding proof that the pitfalls of America's great college sport often trap the unwary when least expected, many of football's top-ranking teams figure to get a temporary "breathing spell" tomorrow in the race for championship objectives.

Five powerhouses currently ranked in the Nation's "first ten," including the top trio—California, Pittsburgh and Alabama—likely will get some relief from the pressure that otherwise rests heavily upon sectional leaders, notably in the East and Southwest.

There's no advance reason, at least, to doubt the ability of California's Golden Bears to flatten U. C. L. A. and continue their all-conquering march. Similarly Pitt and Alabama do not figure to be seriously challenged by Carnegie and Kentucky. Vanderbilt, rated seventh on the national list, and Ohio State, now eighth, look much too powerful for Georgia Tech and Chicago.

Tomorrow's biggest crowd, a capacity turnout of 64,000 at Minneapolis, is expected to witness the resumption of relations between Minnesota and Notre Dame in the Middle West's No. 1 attraction.

Yale and Dartmouth, unbeaten and untied giants of the "Ivy League," will draw close to 60,000 at New Haven for the Eastern headliner. It's noteworthy from a box office standpoint that Navy and Pennsylvania, whose combined records show two ties and three defeats, likely will lure as big a crowd to Franklin Field, Philadelphia, while 50,000 may see the Harvard-Princeton game.

On the intersectional side, Santa Clara's Broncos, boasting a perfect record, make tomorrows' longest jaunt for their match with Marquette at Chicago. The Eastern brigade will send two of its crack outfits into this phase of competition, with Villanova invading Detroit and Fordham moving South to tackle North Carolina.

Here's how they size up from this corner:

Sectional Headliners.

Yale-Dartmouth: The Indians from New Hampshire have Bill Butchinson and epidemic. The Bulldogs have Clint Frank and an able-bodied supporting cast. Twilight in the Big Blue bowl should bring on the discordant notes of the undertaker's song. Yale.

Minnesota-Notre Dame: The Vikings were far ahead of the Irish in exploring the North American continent. This may be closer, but Minnesota's the choice to finish in front.

Baylor-Texas Christian: There's agitation afoot to expand the Southwest Conference. Things are already tough enough. This is the spot for T. C. U. to spring an upset, but the vote goes to Baylor.

Arkansas-Texas A. & M.: Still in the dizzy league. It's another potential upset spot, but the air route seems safe for Arkansas.

Texas-Southern Methodist: Both have been losing, but Texas has been scornig oftener. Texas.

Pittsburgh-Carnegie—The Panthers have proclaimed a new athletic

American U., Dickinson Play Today

Coach Gus Welch leads a crippled American University football team to Pennsylvania today in an attempt to register its second victory of the season at the expense of the strong Dickinson University's eleven.

Heartened by the return of John Jablonsky, burly 200-pound back, who is returning to the scene of many high school performances, Welch hopes at least to get his makeshift team functioning in smooth fashion in preparation for the homecoming game with Randolph-Macon here next week.

The chances for victory are probably as slim as they have been in any previous game the Eagles have

Swift Short Right Puts Champion Out

Crowd of 11,847 Sees Negro Stop Game Little Southerner in Madison Square Garden; Sarron Gets Away to Early Lead.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 29.—Henry Armstrong, sensational Los Angeles Negro fighter, gained undisputed possession of the world featherweight boxing title tonight by knocking out Petey Sarron, of Birmingham, Ala., holder of the National Boxing Association crown, in the sixth round of a 15-round matched that inauguratad the Mike Jacobs regime in Madison Square Garden.

In a sudden and unexpected finish to a whirlwind slugfest, Sarron took the count of ten, on all fours, after capturing four of the first five rounds and boxing his way to a decisive margin on points. The little Syrian weakened without warning under a heavy barrage of blows to the head, staggered half way across the ring, then went down from a short right to the chin.

Sarron was counted out after 2 minutes 37 seconds of the sixth round had elapsed without apparently knowing just how it all happened. Still on his knees, he looked inquiringly at Referee Arthur Donovan and remained in a complete daze as Armstrong's hand was raised in token of victory.

Turns Tide in Fifth.

Armstrong, rallying from an erratic start that seemed to justify the fears of his backers that he had weakened by making the feather limit, turned the tide in the fifth after being outboxed, outsmarted and outpointed decisively during the first four rounds.

Sarron, off to a spectacular start in a fist-tossing spree that had the Garden in an uproar, looked to have the situation well in hand until his defense weakened and his knees sagged suddenly.

Sarron, scaling at the feather limit of 126 to Armstrong's 124, dropped his title after gaining N. B. A. recognition a year and a half ago and turning back three challengers. Armstrong, already recognized as feather king in California, signalized his rise to the top of the heap by scoring his 22nd knockout victory of the year in 23 bouts.

A crowd of 11,847 paid $34,708.28 to witness the triumph of the young Negro, born nearly 25 years ago in St. Louis.

While it lasted the fight was as furiously waged as any bout between little fellows in the Garden in years. Sarron, baldish, but hairy-chested, counter-punched Armstrong dizzy at the start. As the Negro, from a flat-footed stance, drove steadily forward, head down, and both arms swinging, Sarron cuffed and clouted his rival from all angles.

Sarron Skids to Floor.

Twice, in the first and fourth rounds, Sarron skidded to the floor from the force of his own misdirected blows, but got up each time to resume the melee where they left off. Petey kept the harder-hitting Henry off balance so much that many of Armstrong's intended "haymakers" swished harmlessly around the little Syrian's ears.

Twice, in the third round, Armstrong was guilty of landing low punches as Sarron bounced away. This nullified the Negro's best early showing as Referee Donovan automatically awarded the round to the Birmingham boy.

There wasn't an idle moment as Sarron, even when obviously stung by hard shots to the head, showed no reluctance to swap punches at close range. Both let fly frequently with everything they had but by the fifth round it was apparent Sarron was taking too many risks at this kind of milling. Armstrong won this round and opened a cut over Petey's right eye.

Less Than Minute Left.

There was less than a minute left of the sixth round, and no particular warning of the end, when Sarron suddenly showed signs of sagging. Backed into the ropes, Petey covered his head with both hands. He did not offer a return to Armstrong's short, vicious hooks. He was staggering as he backed away. As Armstrong followed, Sarron let loose one final blast. He fired both hands at the Negro but was spun half-way around by a choppy right, and went

W. & L. Ties Gonzaga in Final Spurt

Cuts Down D. C. Team's Lead in 4th Quarter for 13-13 Deadlock.

Arlington, Va., Oct. 29.—Scoring mid-way of the fourth quarter, less than a minute after their foes had forged into the lead with a touchdown and extra point, Washington and Lee High School's Little Generals gained a 13-13 tie with Gonzaga's Purple Passers here this afternoon. The stalemate marked the third time that the W. and L. team has been tied by an eleven from across the District line.

After spotting their opponents a 7-point lead in the first quarter, Gonzaga seemed headed for victory in the final quarter, when Jim Shaw tossed a pass to Jim Ellis, who ran 35 yards to score, and Ellis' pass to Heiberger was good for the extra point, to give the Washingtonians a 13-7 advantage. But in just two plays the Little Generals tallied the tying touchdown. Tucker, big quarterback, brought the kickoff back to Gonzaga's 40-yard line on a nice run, and on the next play Curly Sprinkle heaved a short pass to Tommy Simpson, who twice reversed his field, and galloped 35 yards through the entire Purple team to score.

An attempted pass by Tucker for the extra point that would have brought the Little Generals victory was knocked down by Heiberger.

With still 5 minutes to play, Gonzaga moved deep into W. and L. territory, advancing the ball for three consecutive first downs by virtue of some brilliant running by Shaw and Ellis. But the Little Generals braced and held for downs, and launched a counter-offensive that carried to the Gonzaga 35 as the game ended.

The Little Generals' first touchdown was scored after 5 minutes of play when Sprinkle passed to Simpson, who in turn tossed a lateral

Terps and Gators Meet Today; Hoyas Will Battle Jaspers at Stadium

Hoyas Clash With Jaspers Here Today

Manhattan to Offer Fine Passing at Stadium, Reports Hint.

By Bob Garrison.

Conversion of Manhattan University's football forces into a gridiron cocktail of the same variety will be the aim of the Georgetown University eleven this afternoon when the two teams clash at Griffith Stadium at 2:30 p. m.

Viewing the remaining portion of the Hoya schedule as a menu of desirable victories, Coach Jack Hagerty, who saw his injury-plagued team battle the strong Pennsylvania University team to a scoreless tie last Saturday, would welcome, in no uncertain terms, a victory today as an entree to a happy ending of the season which has three games to go. West Virginia is listed for next week, the N. Y. U. and Maryland.

Loser of their last two tries, Manhattan's Jaspers, are said to be in no frame of mind to tickle anybody's palate, however, as Chick Meehan has had his squad drilling hard for the game with the surprise team of the East, so rated on their showing of last week.

Have Deadly Passer.

Meehan, who is leading a Manhattan team here for the first time, is bringing a sharp-shooting passer to tantalize the Hoyas, whose one glaring weakness in previous games has been pass defense. Vic Fusia, by name, the lad is reputed to be a northern Sammy Baugh, who can flip a football as easily as you do a penny.

But Georgetown is apparently ready for him and his gang. Hagerty has drilled his squad long and diligently in the art of patrolling a pass defense zone and in the meantime has given them a few offensive tricks of their own which may offset any aerial maneuvers aimed in their collective directions.

Tommy Keating, quarterback, who led every back on the field in yards gained in the Penn game, will again carry the brunt of the ball toting chores, and when he chooses to relinquish the responsibility, Elmer Moulin will take charge of the situation. Moulin saw the Penn game from the sidelines because of a leg injury, but showed fight and speed this week in practice.

Hoyas Beaten Last Year.

Georgetown bowed last year to the Green Kelleys, 13-0, in New York but the year before that the Hoyas handed them a lacing by an indentical score. It will be the fifth meeting of the two schools since 1933. The locals hold two victories over their foes, have lost once, while one game, the first, ended in a 20-20 tie.

Villanova and Kentucky have beaten Manhattan this season as has Texas A. & M. but an impressive victory decorates their record also. A victory by virtue of a field goal, 3-0, ovetr Michigan State represents the only victory scored over the Wolverines thus far.

The Jaspers have defeated St. Bonaventure, also, and have yet to play Detroit, No. arolina State, Niagara, and Tulsa.

Georgetown, after opening its season with an easy game with Shenandoah, which it won 38-0, sustained two defeats on successive week-ends at the hands of Holy Cross, to whom it lost, 27-6, and Lafayette, 6-0, before giving its spirited performance last week against Penn in Philadelphia.

to Anderson, and the big W and L. center raced 35 yards down the sidelines to score. Anderson placekicked the extra point.

Gonzaga's initial marker came after a scoreless third period. On a fake reverse, Shaw ran 38 yards to the 2-yard line, from which point he plunged over for the score, after twice being stopped.

The Little Generals' last-minute offensive was seriously impaired by the absence of Tommy Simpson, who was carried from the field suffering with a recurrence of an ankle injury he sustained three weeks ago. Prior to his departure from the game he had been the sparkplug of the W. and L. attack, and had accounted for most of the yardage gained by the hosts.

Gonzaga's two Jims—Shaw and Ellis—were the offensive mainstays for the Purple.

Central's Wilbur Barr Makes 18-Yard Gain Around End

Barr, a stocky fullback, enjoyed a successful day yesterday as Central gained a last-minute 7-7 deadlock with Western in an interhigh game played in the Central Stadium. Besides booting a 20-yard drop kick to tie the score, Barr also was Central's leading ball-carrier, reeling off frequent long gains. The picture shows him about to be tackled after slipping around Western's end in the second quarter.

South Carolina Beats Citadel By 21-6 Count

Gamecocks Strike Early to Defeat State Rivals at Orangeburg.

By the Associated Press.

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 29.—South Carolina offset The Citadel's superior rushing power by seizing advantage of the breaks today to score a 21 to 6 victory before a crowd of 8,000.

The Gamecocks struck on the fifth play of the game for a touchdown. Gene Robinson, Gamecock halfback, took Kooksie Robinson's punt on his own 44-yard line and raced 66 yards for a touchdown. Dearth place-kicked the extra point.

In the second period, a Carolina punt was accidentally touched by Dan Stubbs, Citadel halfback, on his 12-yard line, and bounced into the end zone, where Urban recovered. Clary kicked the extra point.

The third Carolina tally came in the fourth period. Jack Lyon took a Citadel punt on his 45-yard line, cut to his left, raced up the sideline and apparently stumbled. The officials, however, ruled a spectator had emerged suddenly from the sideline, interfered with the Carolina back, and a third touchdown was chalked up.

Lit Durham converted from placement after a near riot had been quelled by police officers and highway patrolmen. Several minutes were needed to clear the field of several hundred cadets and spectators.

last was good for 14 yards and first down on Tulsa's 13. Then Sampson, slanting off left end without a shred of inteference, personally lugged the leather to Tulsa's 3-yard line, where Nowasky took charge of it and ploughed through center for the score. Canning kicked the point.

It was a poor Tulsa punt, incidentally, that started George Washington on the way to its second touchdown almost immediately after the start of the second half. Tulsa, after holding George Washington for downs on its 19-yard line, attempted a quick kick, White back. But it was high and short, and the Buff and Blue took the ball on its own 48.

Sampson dropped back to pass, but on finding all avenues closed tucked the ball under his arm and scampered down the sideline for a first down on the Hurricane's 34. Bill Farmer, whose backfield play was one of the high lights of Tulsa's [illegible] through and smear Vic for an 8-yard loss on the succeeding play but it was a futile gesture. On the next attempt, Sampson completed a pass to Berry for 16 yards and first down on the 22.

Then after hitting the line twice to distract the visitors' attention, Vic again dropped back, this time sending a perfect strike into Yurwitz's hands as the big end topped off a highly successful personal performance by taking the ball in the [illegible]own. Nowaskey's placement, which was to cost [illegible] the game eventually, was wide.

George Washington rallied as [illegible] minutes ticked away in the final period, and with Joey Kaufman [illegible] to work the ball into Tulsa territory. But any thought of an eleventh-hour victory march was dispelled by alert Tommy Thompson, who grabbed Kaufman's last pass on his own 36-yard line. Again, following an exchange of punts, the Colonials attempted to surmount Tulsa's stubborn defense, and again a pass interception brought them up short. And as the final gun barked, Tulsa had the ball down on G. W.'s 12-yard line steadily inching toward another touchdown while stalling for time.

Old Dominion Show Opening Attracts Crowd to Fort Myer

By Jack Munhall.

Lured by opportunity to see 450 of the East's best dogs, more than 1,000 spectators thronged Fort Myer Riding Hall yesterday to witness the colorful opening of the two-day Old Dominion Kennel Show, which ends at 10 o'clock tonight.

Lee Peerson, famed trainer, was on hand with Greaseball, one of the better-known trick dogs of the country, and commanded unusual attention as he put his clever charge through multiple and intricate maneuvers. Among the tricks was a difficult tight wire walk.

Jill of Garstanna, a German shepherd, owned by William R. Crompton, Arlington, Va., became the fourth dog in the country to be so honored when he was awarded the U. D., highest title obtainable in the obedience test. Jill was also adjudged best of breed and finished his championship.

Sophie von Weichfelstrand, a dachshund, owned by Msr. Edith Groves, Fairfax, Va., made her fourth championship and earned recognition as best of her breed. In the same class Pan von Hargerau, owned by the well-known A. S. Colgate, was winner's dog and finished his championship and Helma of Cosalta, owned by the Coslata Kennels, of Bedford, N. Y., was winner's bitch and finished her championship.

Dog owners of this city and nearby Virginia fared well in the first day's competition. In the poodles class, Miss Muffet, owned by Mrs. E. K. Le Fevre, Bethesda, Md., was best of winners and Mrs. Le Fevre's Mouton was winner's dog.

Among the bloodhounds Major of Faircroft, owned by Mrs. C. M. Coulon, of this city, was best of breed. Pihadrig of Amblese, owned by Marjorie Le Conte, Arlington, Va., was best of breed in the Irish wolfhound class.

Best of breed in the French bulldog class was taken by Gwli La Seconde, owned by D. M. Brewer, of this city. In the Chihuahuas class for puppy dogs, Snooty, owned by Mrs. Edward B. King, emerged on top, and then in the limit dogs, Mickey, also owned by Mrs. King, was victorious and was then judged winner's dog and best of breed.

In the Borzois class, Boris Madmen, owned by Mrs. B. K. Slaughter of this city, received awards for best of breed and best of winner's.

This Morning

Meehan is back in the big time. But he isn't complaining yet.

* * * *

His Manhattan team took a 19-0 lacing from Kentucky last week, and Meehan was saying yesterday as he put his squad through the paces at Griffith Stadium that football is on a higher plane in the South than in any other section of the country.

* * * *

"All those lubs down that way are tough," he was saying. "I don't know where those Southern coaches dig 'em up, but they always come up with a fast set of backs. Those Southern boys just seem to have more native speed than the Easterners. We think we're lucky if we have one fast back playing as a regular. Down South, they have two or three of that kind in every backfield."

* * * *

"And somehow they seem to play the game harder in the South. They're always full of fight—those Southern clubs. I don't know what those coaches tell 'em between the halves, but when they come out there on the field against a Northern team they play as if the Civil War was still being fought. But I must give 'em credit."

* * * *

Meehan said he was grateful for one fact, though. He's glad that his Manhattan boys aren't meeting Georgetown at Ebbetts Field, the home stadium of the Jaspers.

* * * *

"I don't know what is that makes our club go bad at home, but I suspect it's the Brooklyn influence," Meehan was saying. "The daffy Brooklyn Dodgers must have hexed us. Almost every time we've been beaten at Ebbetts Field, we've beaten ourselves.

* * * *

"In that game against Villanova a couple of weeks ago, we got licked 20 to 0. And, by golly, Villanova only made 36 yards by rushing. Try Ty to figure that out. My kids just didn't do anything right.

* * * *

"The only thing we accomplished was making an all-American end out of that John Wysocki, of Villanova. He caught a pass for 30 yards and a touchdown and he scored another touchdown by blocking one of our kicks. Then he caught one of our fumbles in midair and galloped to another touchdown. Anything can happen when we play at Ebbetts Field."

* * * *

This department remarked that Meehan's team was a nice, big outfit with plenty of weight in the line and backfield.

"Yeah: that's right," said Chick. "We've got a lot of big ones. See that fellow over there—that beautiful specimen of manhood. Nice looking, huh? Well, he hasn't played a minute of football this year. That's the trouble. Those big, good-looking guys can't make the team. If they were half as impressive on the field as they are in the hotel lobby, I'd have a whale of a football club."

Field Trials Are Opened At Magruder

Andy Gump Outstanding on First Day of Annual Meeting.

Under almost perfect working conditions the twenty-sixth running of the fall trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club got under way yesterday at the Magruder farm, Seneca, Md. Ground conditions were just right for scent, but a little hard on the horses of the handlers.

A change in the program at the drawing started the Derby off first. This year's class of young dogs seemed to have more trouble than usual in finding the birds, but as usual supplied plenty of fun for the spectators with their flash points and almost uncontrolable eagerness.

Andy Gump, a fine setter youngster of 17 months belonging to Harvey Marcey, of Clarendon, Va., was the only dog that really found birds in the initial event, but in the judging placed no better than third. Sometimes it is hard to understand the judges' decisions, unless one closely follows each heat, and then other requirements of a good trial dog are brought to the fore. The desire and ability to find birds is in no way more important than rangeability and stamina and staunchness to flush and shooting.

First and Second.

Rex's Sonnyboy, belonging to W. S. Francis, of Hamilton, Va., cast off in the fifth heat with Dr. E. E. Huffer's Huff's Ex, and in the final judging that is the order in which they placed.

Somewhat odd to see two dogs in the same heat place first and second, but it does happen occasionally.

The heats in the all-age got going rather late in the afternoon, due to the general adjournment to Darnstown for lunch, and there were still two heats to be run as the sun was settling below the hills along the banks of the Potomac.

There were some real classy dogs in this event and there was no way of knowing whether any one dog had an edge on the rest of the field. When one sees such veterans as Valient Three Spot, Huff's Willing Jane, Martex Bill and Jackson in all-age the result will be in doubt until the final tabulation.

The going seemed far better in the afternoon, but then that is perfectly natural, for birds hard to find with the youngsters would be duck soup for these easy working oldsters.

The Shooting Dog Stake that will be run today, starting at 9:30 o'clock, will probably finish up some time late in the afternoon, after which the awards will be made.

There are several exceptional dogs entered and the various heats are bound to supply plenty of interest for the gallery. Castell's Rip that took this stake last year; Joe Perna's Fanny, Frank Kidwell's Just Jim, that came in first last April at Germantown, and Burrow's Broadway Bill.

entered, for they will be facing an undefeated team boasting one of the East's leading scorers in the person of Bill Padjen, who is said to know his way blindfolded around opposing ends.

Welch will start two freshmen, who have seen very little service, but have shown well in practice during the past two weeks. Johnny Bowers, who has impressed with his passing ability, will be inserted in the backfield and will play beside Hal Toner, Sam Hickey and Bill Harris.

Red Maloney will start his first game at the guard post with another new name, Bert Schweigert. Maloney is a freshman and Schweigert a new addition to the team, having joined the squad after helping Welch demonstrate the fine points of the rolling block. He is a gymnast and is shifty and fast.

Kimber Shoop and Pete Sitnick, veterans, are starting at the end posts, with Ray Nelson and Joe Britton at tackle.

Terps Battle With Gators Here Today

Florida Eleven Stages Workout for Contest at College Park.

Maryland and Florida football teams, that will offer a battle of the Southeastern Conference vs. the Southern Conference in Byrd Stadium at College Park this afternoon, tuned up yesterday on the same field.

The 'Gators, who got to town shortly before noon yesterday, had a session on the practice gridiron at College Park in the afternoon at 3 o'clock, and when they got through the Terps put on the finishing touches.

Coach Josh Cody, of the 'Gators, and Mentor Frank Dobson, of the Terps, old pals, each was making the rival team the favorite, but the fans and so-called experts were seeing the game as a 50-50 affair.

It is one that Dobson would like greatly to win, as it will be homecoming, with an influx of old grads, and it also will mark the silver anniversary of the return of President H. C. Byrd to his alma mater. And "the football coach who built a great university" will be among the alumni looking on.

An all-day program has been arranged to entertain the returning alumni and to honor President Byrd, with the homecoming dance offering the grand finale. There will be something doing all the time in between.

The football game starts at 2:30 but the early arrivals to the contest will be well entertained. The Pershing rifles, Maryland's crack military unit, will give a drill at 2:10 in Byrd Stadium and the Terps' 64-piece band also will be on hand to dispense melodies.

Central Player Admits Marriage

In a surprising statement made to reporters in the Central dressing room yesterday following the Central-Western football game, Hugh Cramer, Central's giant all-high tackle, revealed that he has been married since early last May to Dorothy Cummings, a local girl residing at 5022 Illinois avenue northwest.

Cramer also announced that he will not again play football for Central. This was not unexpected for he is a senior and has been idle for the past several weeks, due to a dislocated shoulder. Cramer played a few minutes last week against Roosevelt but has not been in uniform since.

Following February graduation from Central Cramer expects to enter George Washington University.

Members of the Tulsa and Manhattan University elevens who are playing football here this week-end against George Washington and Georgetown, respectively, have a great interest in each other's ability as they face December 4 at Tulsa . . . so last night the entire Manhattan team sat in the stands and watched with keen interest the doings of the Oilers and in retaliation the Tulsa boys will spy on the Jaspers this afternoon . . . PEGGY LAVENDER, George Washington University co-ed, daughter of Navy Commander Robert A. Lavender, who was recently selected as one of the most beautiful and talented girls in the Army-Navy set, filled a big job this past summer it seems . . . she was a life-guard at Mountain Lake Beach, Williamsport, Pa., which makes her aces in this column under the head of versatility. . .

The broken leg sustained by TOMMY RAY, Rockville, Md., high school's high point soccer scorer, was the first broken bone in the game in this vicinity this season . . . although Rockville was winning the mythical Montgomery County title Thursday and didn't exactly need it, he was all ready to boot another goal for his club when he met with the accident . . . FRANK KOSCIS, University of Florida guard, who, incidently, is the son of the former wrestling champion of Hungary, is one tough baby . . . when he was playing here, with Central High, he was accidently shot in the side by his little sister in the middle of the 1932 season and returned to play before the season was completed . . . just a tip to Maryland, when he starts getting tough, it won't help much to shoot him, unless a cannon is handy . . . all bedecked in a new "DON JUAN" Camel Hair overcoat that is very becoming, SHIRLEY POVICH, our ace, is said to be in the market for a ROBERT TAYLOR fedora, and may even take a turn writing Advice to the Lovelorn Column. . .

Second Round.

Round Three.

Armstrong shot two rights to the body the last of which rocked Sarron. Petey cuffed Armstrong about the face with rights and lefts. Armstrong opened up with a two fisted assault that had Sarron on the defensive for the first time during the bout. Henry was scoring with lefts to the body and rights to the head. Sarron shot a right for the jaw but mised. They exchanged stiff rights to the head. Both missed with long rights. Armstrong mised a right to the head and Sarron came in with a hard left to the ear. Sarron missed a hard right just as the bell sounded. It was Sarron's round.

Round Four.

Sarron missed two short lefts as Armstrong connected with a right to the body. Armstrong drove a short right to Sarron's face, but was wide with another right. Sarron banged three hard rights to Armstrong's head. They mixed furiously at close quarters. Armstrong bounced two short lefts off Sarron's jaw. Sarron was missing oftener with his right. Sarron bounced a hard right off Armstrong's neck. There was so much force behind the blow, Petey slipped to the floor, but was up immediately. They were slugging away at the bell. Sarron's round.

Round Five.

There was a slight cut over Sarron's right eye as he came out for the fifth. Armstrong drove Sarron into the ropes with two hard rights to the head. The Negro was forcing the fighting but Sarron's cleverness kept Henry off balance much of the time. Armstrong belted the Syrian around with rights and lefts and again had Pete on the defensive. Sarron rallied to score twice with rights to the head but Armstrong came back with a long right that was equally damaging. Armstrong fired rights and lefts to Sarron's head and Petey replied in kind. Armstrong's round.

Round Six.

They fought at close quarters on even terms. Armstrong got in a missed with another left. Armleft to the side of Sarron's head but strong was shooting for the Syrian's body. Sarron rallied and scored repeatedly with rights and lefts to Armstrong's midrift. Henry got in

War Admiral Favored Over Seabiscuit in Washington Handicap Today

Strong Field For $15,000 Laurel Prize

Crowd of 25,000 Expected to See Turf Kings Clash Today.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Oct. 29.—If those leaking skies that have allowed only four fast tracks in 24 days of racing here will only go into semi-retirement, this race track will offer one of the best battles the turf has seen this year. On a fast course, it will be War Admiral vs. Seabiscuit, and the pair of them against eight others, including Heelfly, Aneroid, Calumet Dick, Firethorn, Burning Star, Eagle Pass, Chanceview and Challephen.

These ten were named overnight for tomorrow's $15,000 added Washington Handicap, a test of a mile and a quarter, which, in the event that War Admiral and Seabiscuit start, might well be termed the "Stake Championship of 1937." Should either War Admiral or Seabiscuit carry off the decision, the winner's share will be enough to insure the money-earning title for the year.

Upward of 25,000 are expected to witness the race and watch War Admiral meet older horses for the first time in his career. The Derby and Preakness winner demonstrated his fitness last Tuesday, when he galloped along in front of Aneroid and others. He carried only 106 pounds on that occasion, and tomorrow must shoulder 126 pounds against Seabiscuit's 130.

Admiral Favored.

Despite the fact that he is actually giving away weight according to the scale of ages, War Admiral is likely to be a 6-to-5 favorite, with Seabiscuit probably held at 2 to 1. Heefly will have some backers, but you can name your own price on the others.

War Admiral has done his best racing at the distance of The Washington and once again is favored by the draw of post positions. In the Derby and Preakness he was at No. 1. Tomorrow, as was the case last Tuesday, War Admiral will be on the outside, where his early speed should keep him out of trouble.

Should War Admiral win tomorrow, his appearance next Wednesday might be the final of his racing career. Owner Samuel D. Riddle is anxious to get War Admiral to the stud as quickly as possible, where he would take the place of the aging Man o' War. With a victory over Seabiscuit, the year's handicap champion, under his saddle belt, War Admiral probably would not be sent to the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap.

The big three of the handicap division, War Admiral, Seabiscuit and Heelfly, may meet here tomorrow. The overnight entries for the $15,000 added Washington Handicap included this star trio as well as seven others. Shortly after he placed the entry for War Admiral, Trainer George Conway said that the son of Man o' War would march postward only if the track is fast. If the mud comes up again, it is unlikely that Seabiscuit and Heelfly will start. Handlers of both have indicated that they are not in favor of sending their charges into competition on a badly off track.

A bright sun and a strong wind was aiding a large track crew in preparation of the oval this morning. Works earlier showed that the course was better than "slow" and there is every indication that it will be fast tomorrow, barring more rain.

Seabiscuit, owned by C. S. Howard, and War Admiral, unbeaten 3-year-old champion and the property of the Glen Riddle Farm, will have the money-winning championship of the year at stake in the Washington. The winner's share tomorrow would be enough to virtually clinch the honors in all divisions for one or the other.

Seabiscuit carries top weight, but being a year older than War Admiral, the track handicapper indicates that the Man o' War colt is the best. Seabiscuit carries 130, with 126 for War Admiral. Aneroid must carry 125 pounds, with the weights scaling down to 108 for Challephen.

War Admiral and Heelfly were on the track this morning. The former breezed a half in 50 2-5, while the latter went three-quarters easily in 1:19.

The Spaulding Lowe Jenkins Handicap, a $5,000 added test of a mile, supports the feature and promises to be a keen struggle. Fifteen juveniles have been named, with Teddy's Comet and The Chief probably due to draw the chief backing.

Wheat Lower After Nervous Day's Trading

Declines in Liverpool and Drop in Exports Are Factors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Moderate net losses formed the outcome of Chicago wheat trading today after the market had several times nervously changed its general trend.

Outstanding factors on the side of lower prices here for wheat were sharp downturns of Liverpool quotations, together with cables saying crops prospects in Argentina were being maintained, and that official estimates of Argentine wheat acreage had been decidedly increased. Furthermore, export business in North American wheat today was estimated as totaling but 500,000 to 600,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futurs were ¼-⅞ cents under yesterday's finish, December 96-96⅛, May 95¼-⅜, July 90⅞-91, corn unchanged to ⅜ lower, December 58⅞-59, May 59⅝, July 60⅜; oats ¼-⅜ up, December 30⅜, and rye varying from 1 cent decline to ¼ gain, December 73¾.

Stocks Close Higher but Lose Some Earlier Gains on President's Interview.

New York, Oct. 29.—Stocks, bonds and commodities worked higher, but a vigorous recovery in stocks was halted in mid-afternoon by the President's newspaper interview. Closing quotations were nevertheless higher on the day, by 1 to 3 points, in a volume of around 3,000,000 shares. December wheat closed half a cent lower at 96 cents a bushel.

Stocks opened higher, especially among the favorites, as Steel, Chrysler, General Electric, General Motors and Bethlehem took breath and then advanced steadily until top prices were reached shortly before noon. Profit taking kept the market in check for a while, but large volume was maintained and no particular recession in prices occurred. Around half past 1 o'clock a news ticker flashed its interpretation of what President Roosevelt said at his press conference today. That seemed to be that the President turned thumbs down on any tax revision but, on the contrary, hinted at unchanged purpose to go ahead with his wage-and-hours bill and to collect more money.

Rally Is Halted.

Prices dropped a point or so in a flurry of selling, which let up on a rival news ticker's different interpretation, which modified the interview to show a mere preference for helping the poor, in some way or another, before changing the tax laws. In the interim the market stopped rather cold on the uncertainty as to just what the President really did say and more particularly as to what he meant by what he said. In this neck of the woods the changes in capital gains tax and undistributed profits tax have been advocated because it is believed such changes will stimulate business and thereby enable it to have more profits from which to make contributions to the Treasury, for such use as the President may see fit to make.

That keeps open a broad field of new taxation and business repression under the mistaken idea that the way to get the golden eggs is to starve the helpless geese. However, in his sudden decision to come to the aid of the stock market with a reduction of margins, the President has shown that in spite of his words, he is quite alive to the implications of a business depression. He may yet change his mind about taxation and Treasury deficits.

During the closing hour the trading was noticeable for slackness and indecision rather than for weakness. Prices held fairly above the halfway mark to the top of the day. In the list of stocks to run up 3 to 7 points at the best were Allied Chemical, Santa Fe, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Coca-Cola, duPont, Steel, Philip Morris, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber and Westinghouse.

Trade Settling Back.

Meanwhile trade news indicates a moderate recession in business, but scarcely can be used as a sign that the country is plunging into a real depression. As for consumption trade in this district, the New York Federal Reserve Bank reports a rise of 3 per cent in gross sales of department stores in the first two weeks of October, as compared with a year ago, when prices were lower in most cases. Public purchasing here at least looks to be holding steady. Undoubtedly it has declined in certain districts dependent upon factory workers in the heavy industries, as the steel mills, but it probably is rising in the rural regions of the West and North.

Decline in heavy industries is indicated by the monthly survey of the Federal Reserve Board. The industrial production index, adjusted seasonally, dropped in September to 111, compared with 117 in August and 109 in September of last year. The board finds that the first part of October found output cut to the level of a year ago, although distribution to consumers was maintained at the level of previous months. Building failed to show a seasonal rise last month.

Credit Eases.

On the credit side, the changes shown in the weekly report of the Federal Reserve Board suggest a slackening demand for money. Currency circulation this week fell abruptly, against ordinarily a small decline, and that was largely responsible for a large addition, $50,000,000, in excess reserves. Gold imports were the smallest in a long time, as hoarding abroad is taking care of much of the gold that otherwise would come this way. An interesting item in the report was that, for the second week in succession, after months of advance, commercial loans declined. The week's drop for New York banks was $38,000,000.

Short Margins.

In reducing the minimum margin required for clients of its members, the stock exchange continues a rate for low-priced stocks in excess of the minimum set by the Federal Reserve Board. The new rates for the stock exchange are $5 a share or 30 per cent of price, whichever is the larger. That works out at 50 per cent of price for a $10 stock, or the same as the Federal Reserve Board's requirement. Requirements on stocks selling for more than $33 a share will fall under the 50 per cent minimum of the board. Stocks selling for less than $10 a share cannot be sold short on the board's prescribed minimum of 50 per cent of price, for then the stock exchange's minimum comes into play. It works out at 100 per cent margin for a $5 stock and 500 per cent margin for a $1 stock, rates which continue to be preventive for short selling in the class of stocks containing the largest number of worthless issues.

Streamline Business, L. H. Brown Advises

Hot Springs, Va., Oct. 29 (AP).—A "brand-new, streamlined, 1938-model impression of business" is needed to make friends for industry among the American public, Lewis H. Brown, president of the Johns-Manville Corporation, told the Association of National Advertisers today. Brown appealed to the advertising men to come to the aid of business management by applying to the task specialized knowledge of advertising technique and intelligent showmanship. Making friends for industry, Brown said, is the most important job facing business leaders. Failure to do this job will jeopardize the system of private enterprise, he said.

Wall St. Heads Talk With SEC Over Relations

Officials of the New York Stock Exchange talked over a range of subjects yesterday with Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities Commission, but left without disclosing any details.

Douglas announced the discussion "centered around the present relations of the exchange with the commission."

Those attending the conference included E. H. H. Simmons, former president of the exchange; Walter L. Johnson, its vice president; William Jackson, exchange counsel; Gayer G. Dominick, a governor of the big board; Paul V. Shields, of Shields & Co., and Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission and first chairman of the SEC.

Meanwhile, a check-up of Securities Commission records indicated that a huge backlog of new industrial financing may be released, once business is assured of fairly stable market conditions.

Securities Commission records showed that since Sept. 1, 69 companies have requested postponement of the effective date of issues totaling more than $200,000,000.

Ten of these issues have since been withdrawn, but the backlog remaining on the commission's books included securities of 44 companies totaling $116,000,000, in addition to 15 others recorded only by numbers of shares.

V. M. I. to Test Army Gridders This Afternoon

Cadets Expect a Tough Battle With Leaders of Conference.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 29 (AP).—The Army football team, given a "Breather" last week end against Washington U. of St. Louis, anticipates a harder game tomorrow in Michie stadium when it faces Virginia Military Institute, leader of the Southern Conference.

After losing two early-season games, V. M. I. has come along fast under the coaching of Pooley Hubert to win its last four games. The Southern Cadets' backfield stars are Sophomore Paul Shu, who has scored in every game, and fullback Andy Trzeciak, who calls signals, punts and attends to most of the passing.

Woodrow Wilson has been shifted to tailback in the Army lineup, a move that is counted on to strengthen the Cadets' overhead game.

Probable Line-ups:

Army.	Position.	V. M. I.
Kobes	L.E.	Brittingham
Stella	L.T.	Strickler

Referee—R. E. Kinney (Trinity). Umpire—P. L. Reagan (Villanova). Linesman—Dean Watkeys (Syracuse). Field judge—D. Daley (Boston College). Time of game—2 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Georgetown Prep Defeats Landon, 12-6

Runback of Punt by Boylan Paves Way for Little Hoya Victory.

An elusive runback of a punt by Joe Boylan, sub halfback, late in the final quarter gave Georgetown Prep a delayed victory over Landon Prep, yesterday, on the Garrett Park Field, 12-6.

After Landon had tied the score at 6-6 in the third period and had reached the 5-yard line twice in the same period but had failed to take a lead, the Little Hoyas won when Tommy Graham terminated a 35-yard drive by scoring from the 2-yard line.

Taking a punt on his own 40-yard line, Boylan, 190-pounder, tore through a host of Landon tacklers to reach the Landon 35-yard line just when it appeared the game would end in a tie.

Getting into the spirit of the thing, Graham and Ed Cummings, who had scored the first Georgetown touchdown in the opening period, banged their way to the goal just before the game closed.

Landon, fighting hard as the second half opened, tied the score when a pass, Perkins to Cunningham, from the 20-yard line, was good for a goal.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 29 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—A waiting attitude predominated in the wool market today. Reports of a price reduction of wool piece goods received attention by the trade as it sought to ascertain the response of the goods trade to the lower figures.

Some wool houses were encouraged by inquiries of users, though buyers were not apparently interested in making commitments except at prices considerably below existing levels.

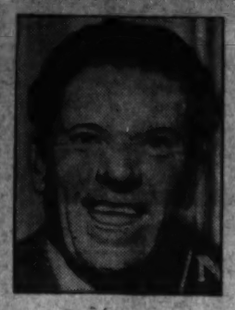
Bob Burns Says—



I'll bet a lot of people are gonna give me an argument when I say I don't think conditions change people a bit. When a picture actor gets a big break, and "goes Hollywood," you can bet your bottom dollar the streak was always there but he just never had a chance to show it before.

I had an uncle down home that got married when he was very poor and in later years he come into a lot'ta money. His wife thought that all this wealth had changed him toward her. She use'ta sit around and brood and finally he said "What in the world are you broodin' about?" and she says, "Well, you're either gettin' lazy with your wealth or you don't love me like you used to when we was first married, because you use'ta help me with the dishes and you never do now."

He says, "Well, you're wrong on both counts. Remember in them old days we only had two dishes!"

BENNY After Office Hours. By J. Carver Pusey

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

Sad Announcement

Your Government, seasonal-minded, turns to the turkey; and being individual men, the likes of you and me, they have no pleasure in the pronouncement that prices will be up this fall and winter.

Actually, your Government is making a serious effort to give you a better turkey, one, in fact, that will fit your small oven. Stanley J. Marsden, Alfred R. Lee and other scientists have for two years been experimenting on the smaller turkey at the Beltsville Station, in Maryland, and are able to report progress very near to the perfection point.

Right now, in this turkey season, the housewife probably realizes that she had rather have a small turkey than a large one. To quote the Government: "Our grandmothers cooked turkeys weighing as much as 24 to 26 pounds dressed, but cooking ovens and pans in most homes today will not accommodate a dressed turkey if it weighs more than 18 to 20 pounds. Also, the housewife today demands a smaller turkey to suit the needs of the average family."

So the scientists have been at work. Different varieties of birds—some with short legs, broad backs and plump bodies—have been used in the breeding experiments that hope to develop perfectly strains with relatively smaller bodies.

For the sake of the record, as it concerns Miss Evelyn Adams, of Interior, we note that she has no objection, whatever, to that dance, the Big Apple. She complains to us that a local journal put her "in a very prudish attitude" when it reported that she lifts moral and esthetic eyebrows on the dance. "I rather like the Big Apple," said Miss Adams; "I don't mind being quoted as liking the Big Apple."

SATURDAY'S CHILDREN: Representative George A. Dondero, president, Michigan State Society, will be a prominent figure at the dance the Michigan organization gives this evening at the Lafayette Hotel . . . Also in official evidence will be O. J. Dompierre, Alvin Meissner, Mrs. Elsie Gould, Donald Luxford, Mr. and Mrs. Fillmore Stolpe, Mrs. Dompierre, Miss Fannie Sheldon, Miss Helen Pine and Mrs. E. Contee Meredith . . . People from another part of the Union, members of the Florida State Society and their friends, will dance at the Raleigh Hotel in the aftermath of the Florida-Maryland football game . . . The New York State Society opens its winter season with a Halloween dance in the Shoreham; officials who will greet the home-Staters are Dr. LaMar Harris, C. M. Little, Miss Pauline B. Paro, Walter D. Sutcliffe, Samuel J. Gompers, Miss Leona Decker, Dr. W. J. Davis, John Taber, M. C.; John J. Boylan, M. C.; James P. B. Duffy, M. C.; William F. Richards, Herbert G. Barott and Henry H. Wright . . . Nine men dressed like Supreme Court Justices will choose prize winners at the dance the Social Security Board Union, No. 10, U. F. W. A., gives this evening in the grand ballroom of the Willard . . . The ball is the chief U. F. W. A. Halloween attraction . . . And today, the grand event of the I. D. R. A.—pitched on a background of whoopings and the draperies of ghosts last night—is just something else for Editor Samuel M. Barrett to embalm in his I. D. R. A. book.

A FREE CONCERT is offered this afternoon by the Coolidge Quartet (they have never said they do not choose to play) in the auditorium of the Library of Congress. The program will begin at 3:30 o'clock. Tickets may be secured from the music department of the library. Requests must be made early as the seating capacity of the hall is limited.

ONE OF OUR AGENTS comments on the placing of some statuary in the halls of the Postoffice Department, which he describes as very pretty and appropriate statuary. And he wondered why it didn't receive such publicity as the murals, which he describes as not very pretty.
